John Clare Simon Kövesi, 2017-08-02 This book investigates what it is that makes John Clare's poetic vision so unique and asks how we use Clare for contemporary ends. It explores much of the criticism that has appeared in response to his life and work and asks hard questions about the modes and motivations of critics and editors. Clare is increasingly regarded as having been an environmentalist long before the word appeared; this book investigates whether this green rush to place him as a radical proto-ecologist does any disservice to his complex positions in relation to social class, work, agriculture, poverty, and women. This book attempts to unlock Clare's own theorisations and practices of what we might now call an ecological consciousness and works out how his ecocentric mode might relate to that of other Romantic poets. Finally, this book asks how we might treat Clare as our contemporary while still being attentive to the peculiarities of his unique historical circumstances.

Red Quarter Moon Anne Konrad, 2012-01-30 Anne Konrad's Red Quarter Moon is the gripping account of her search for family members lost and disappeared within the Soviet Union. Konrad's ancestors, Mennonites, had settled the Ukrainian steppes in the late 1790s. An ethno-religious minority, they became special objects of Soviet persecution. Though her parents fled in 1929, many relatives remained in the USSR. Konrad's search for these missing extended family members took place over twenty years and five continents on muddy roads, lonesome steppes, and in old letters, documents, or secret police archives. Her story emerges as both haunting and inspiring, filled with dramatically different accounts from survivors now scattered across the world. She aligns the voices of her subjects chronologically against the backdrop of Soviet policy, intertwining the historical
