Reform Of Civil Procedure Essays On Access To Justice:

Reform of Civil Procedure A. A. S. Zuckerman, Ross Cranston, 1995 European Traditions in Civil Procedure C. H. van Rhee, 2005 European co operation has resulted in many new and challenging opportunities for legal scholars who since the so called codification period have become used to operating in a purely national context This applies also to scholars in the field of civil procedure who for a considerable period of time have resisted leaving the purely national domain These scholars have devoted a great deal of attention to the question whether or not harmonisation of civil procedural law is a feasible option and if so in what manner harmonisation should be achieved The contributors to this book seek to further the harmonisation debate by exploring some of the main trends in the development of civil procedural law during the last two centuries in several European countries Germany Austria Switzerland France England and Wales The Netherlands and Belgium Two of the central issues that are addressed by the contributors are the extent to which the various procedural models have influenced each other and the extent to which common traditions in civil procedural law may be distinguished in Europe Each general chapter in this book is supplemented by three chapters devoted to specific procedural topics Conciliation Party Interrogation as Evidence and the Role of the Judge In addition extensive bibliographical references are included

The Class Action in Common Law Legal Systems Rachael Mulheron, 2004-11-15 Multi party litigation is a world wide legal process and the class action device is one of its best known manifestations As a means of providing access to justice and achieving judicial economies the class action is gaining increasing endorsement particularly given the prevalence of mass consumerism of goods and services and the extent to which the activities and decisions of corporations and government bodies can affect large numbers of people The primary purpose of this book is to compare and contrast the class action models that apply under the federal regimes of Australia and the United States and the provincial regimes of Ontario and British Columbia in Canada While the United States model is the most longstanding there have now been sufficient judicial determinations under each of the studied jurisdictions to provide a constructive basis for comparison In the context of the drafting and application of a workable class action framework it is apparent that similar problems have been confronted across these jurisdictions which in turn promotes a search for assistance in the experience and legal analysis of others The book is presented in three Parts The first Part deals with the class action concept and its alternatives and also discusses and critiques the stance of England where the introduction of the opt out class action model has been opposed The second Part focuses upon the various criteria and factors governing commencement of a class action encompassing matters such as commonality superiority suitability and the class representative Part 3 examines matters pertaining to conduct of the action itself such as becoming a class member notice requirements settlement judgments and costs and fees The book is written to have practical utility for a wide range of legal practitioners and professionals such as academics and students of comparative civil procedure and multi party litigation litigation lawyers who may use the reference materials cited to the benefit of their own class action clients and those charged with law reform who look to adopt the most workable and avoid the unworkable features in class action models elsewhere Justice In The 21st Century

Restorative Justice & Responsive Regulation John Braithwaite, 2002 Braithwaite's argument against punitive justice systems and for restorative justice systems establishes that there are good theoretical and empirical grounds for anticipating that well designed restorative justice processes will restore victims offenders and communities better than existing criminal justice practices Counterintuitively he also shows that a restorative justice system may deter incapacitate and rehabilitate more effectively than a punitive system This is particularly true when the restorative justice system is embedded in a responsive regulatory framework that opts for deterrence only after restoration repeatedly fails and incapacitation only after escalated deterrence fails Braithwaite's empirical research demonstrates that active deterrence under the dynamic regulatory pyramid that is a hallmark of the restorative justice system he supports is far more effective than the passive deterrence that is notable in the stricter sentencing grid of current criminal justice systems

English Civil Justice after the Woolf and Jackson Reforms John Sorabji, 2014-06-26 John Sorabji examines the theoretical underpinnings of the Woolf and Jackson reforms to the English and Welsh civil justice system He discusses how the Woolf reforms attempted and failed to effect a revolutionary change to the theory of justice that informed how the system operated It elucidates the nature of those reforms which through introducing proportionality via an explicit overriding objective into the Civil Procedure Rules downgraded the court's historic commitment to achieving substantive justice or justice on the merits In doing so Woolf's new theory is compared with one developed by Bentham while also exploring why a similarly fundamental reform carried out in the 1870s succeeded where Woolf's failed It finally proposes an approach that could be taken by the courts following implementation of the Jackson reforms to ensure that they succeed in their aim of reducing litigation cost through properly implementing Woolf's new theory of justice

Courts, Justice, and Efficiency Hector Fix-Fierro, 2004-01-06 This study explores the socio legal context of economic rationality in the legal and judicial systems It examines the meaning and relevance of the concept of efficiency for the operation of courts and court systems seeking to answer questions such as in what sense can we say that the adjudicative process works efficiently What are the relevant criteria for the measurement and assessment of court efficiency Should the courts try to operate efficiently and to what extent is this viable What is the proper relationship between efficiency and justice considerations in a judicial proceeding To answer these questions a conceptual framework is developed on the basis of empirical studies and surveys carried out mainly in the United States Western Europe and Latin America Two basic ideas emerge from it First economic rationality has penetrated the legal and judicial systems at all levels and dimensions from the level of society as a whole to the day to day operation of the courts from the institutional dimension of adjudication to the organizational context of judicial decisions Far from being an alien value in the judicial process efficiency has become an inseparable part of the structure of expectations we place on the legal system Second economic rationality is not the prevalent value in legal decision making as it is subject to all kinds of constraints local conditions and concrete negotiations with other values and interests
