

Māori Creation Story

In the beginning of time there were nothing on earth, not a sky, just Te Pō, darkness. In the Te Pō there were three beings: Hāpū, the sky father and Papatūmākorua the earth mother who was to be. They lay together in a tight embrace. Together, they had many children who were all gods. The ones that became those in the heavens.

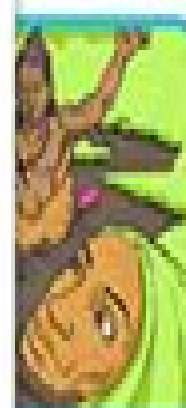

These gods are not in the past and have magical powers. They control those things about the creation of the universe and the origin of gods and of man. Natural events, the weather, the stars and the moon, the fish, and the birds are all found in these gods.

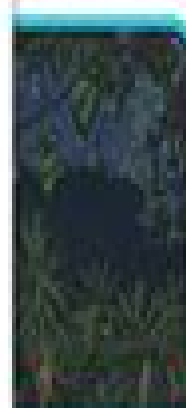

As the children grew up, they wondered what it would be like to live in the light. Tāwhiri-mātea, the fastest of all the sons, decided to be the leader. "Let's all leave!" The brothers disagreed. Tāwhiri-mātea, the god of the forests and birds, had a solution to the problem. "We will push them apart. Hāpū will be in the sky above us and Papatūmākorua will stay below us in the oceans below."

As the mother and the father were being torn apart, they said, "Please don't bring this upon us!" They lay together, and finally they were separated. They had their children and the world was being made.

Heaven and earth is deep. The time for earth to be and then it is up into the the clouds, rain, and snow and created the world and created the world and created the world. They were and the world was.

children for the world. In the land of Te Pō, the world was made and then.
