Mapping Small Places Examining Your Environment:

Children's Participation Roger A. Hart, 2013-10-11 People's relationship to nature is the greatest issue facing the world at the turn of the millennium and all over the world young people have shown enormous enthusiasm for environmental action. Many countries are radically reassessing both the role of citizens in managing their environment and the rights and responsibilities of children to be involved in shaping their own and their communities' futures. This book by one of the world's leading authorities on environmental education is written in the conviction that children can play a valuable and lasting role in sustainable development if their participation is taken seriously and planned with thought for their developing capabilities and unique strengths. Through direct participation children can develop a genuine appreciation of democracy and a sense of their own competence and responsibility. The planning, design, monitoring and management of the physical environment is an ideal domain for their participation in part because their commitment to it is so strong. The book is for planners, educationalists and environmentalists introducing the theory and the practice of children's participation and its importance for developing democracy and sustainable communities. It emphasises genuine participation where children are themselves involved in defining problems and acting as reflective critical participants in issues affecting their communities. The environment is interpreted broadly to include for example the planning of housing areas and the management of playgrounds. Detailed case studies are provided from urban and rural poor and middle class communities from both the North and South. For teachers, group facilitators and community leaders it presents organising principles, successful models, practical techniques and resources for involving young people in environmental projects.

Exploring Creativity Through Writing

Alan Maley, Sharon Sunny, 2025-08-01 The book explores the nature of human creativity and its importance in education with reference to past and ongoing work on creativity theory. It aims to direct the attention of teachers to the need for creativity in education by dispelling the mystique surrounding it and the feelings of inadequacy or apprehension it may evoke in educators, particularly in the Asia region. The book offers an introduction to creativity in writing, the rationale for including it in language programmes, the benefits it can bestow and the results it can produce as well as dealing with common objections to it. It divides creative writing into two major sections: poetry and stories, followed by a copious set of varied classroom activities. For each activity a standard format is adopted to offer teachers maximum support in implementing the procedures, including supplementary comments on each activity. It is distinct for its accessibility and clarity, its abundance of practical and ready-to-use classroom activities and its unique combination of theoretical underpinnings and practical implementation. This book will be useful to students, pre-service teachers and researchers who are new to the teaching of English Language, both in the Asian context and in the wider world. It will also be an essential companion to practicing in-service teachers and Teacher Trainers to further sharpen their concepts and skills.

Mapping and Analysing Crime Data
Alex Hirschfield, Kate Bowers, 2003-09-02 One of the key methods of reducing and dealing with criminal activity is to accurately gauge and then analyse the geographical distribution of crime from small scale to large scale areas Once the police and government know what areas suffer most from criminal activity they can assess why this is the case and then deal with it in the most effective way Crime mapping and the spatial analysis of crime data have become recognised as powerful tools for the study and control of crime Much of the emerging demand for more information and detailed crime pattern analysis have been driven by legislative changes such as the UK's new Crime and Disorder Act which has placed a joint statutory duty on Police Forces and Local Authorities to produce crime and disorder audits for their areas The book sets out methods used in the fields of Geographical Information Systems and highlights areas of best practice examines the types of problems to which spatial crime analysis can be applied reviews the capabilities and limitations of existing techniques and explores the future directions of spatial crime analysis and the need for training It centres on a series of case studies highlighting the experiences of academics and practitioners in agencies centrally involved in the partnership approach to crime prevention Practitioners and academics not only in the UK but also worldwide should be interested in the book as an up to date information resource and a practical guide

J. Jeffery, 2003-11-06 This book explores the relationship between cellular processes and animal behaviour It does this by focusing on the domain of navigation bringing together scientists from either side of the brain behaviour divide in an attempt to explain the linkage between spatial behaviour and the underlying activity of neurons The Neurobiology of Spatial Behaviour is organised into two sections Section one deals with the so called higher levels of description studies of spatial behaviour and the brain areas that might underlie such behaviour The section begins with insects remarkably sophisticated navigators and ends with humans examining along the way issues such as whether animal brains contain maps and whether spatial and non spatial information interact and if so how Section two delves further into the brain and focuses on the mammalian representation of space and the role of place cells These issues have far wider ramifications that simply helping us to understand the process of navigation This system might provide a model for how other forms of knowledge beliefs and intentions are encoded in neurons As such the book will be of interest to an interdisciplinary audience including ethologists psychologists behavioural neuroscientists computational modellers physiological neuroscientists and molecular biologists Draft Technical Examination, Environmental Assessment (EA) B2; Draft Land Use Analysis ,1976 Environmental Health for All David J. Briggs, Richard M. Stern, Tim L. Tinker, 2012-12-06 Accurate assessment of environmental hazards and related risks is a primary prerequisite for effective environmental health protection at both the individual and collective level National and regional policies on environmental health need to be guided by knowledge about the risks to the populations involved as the Environmental Action Plan for Europe notes priority setting requires the comparative assessment of risks to health of different environmental factors against the cost of controlling them In recent years this has assumed particular importance for with the encouragement of the World Health Organisation WHO all countries in Europe are committed to producing National Environmental Health Action Plans NEHAPs which will define priorities and targets for environmental health and the actions needed to achieve them Reliable information on risks is clearly fundamental to this process Individual risk assessment is no less important in this context Much of the responsibility and capacity to improve public health lies ultimately in the choices e g about diet smoking alcohol consumption sexual activities sporting activities travel mode place of residence and occupation which we make as individuals If we are to improve and protect our own health therefore and in so doing play our personal role in achieving the targets set by these Plans we need to be guided by a clear understanding of the risks involved The History of a Periphery Juliet B.
