Introducing the Human Genome

The Human Genome

The Human Genome Project (HGP) is an international research effort to determine the sequence of the human genome. The project is a collaborative effort between scientists from many countries, including the United States, the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Japan, and the Soviet Union. The project is funded by the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the Human Genome Research Institute (HGRI).

Project Objectives

The project has several major objectives. First, it aims to determine the sequence of the human genome, which consists of approximately 3 billion base pairs of DNA. Second, it aims to identify all the genes in the human genome, which are estimated to be between 20,000 and 25,000. Third, it aims to understand the function of these genes and how they interact with each other and the environment.

This study reports on the development and function of the human body's immune system, which is responsible for protecting the body from disease. The study was conducted in 17 countries, and the results show that the immune system is a complex system that is constantly changing and adapting to the environment.

personal reports have included a 10-day charter boat (Phase I), in which guests provide information for a single subject and a 30-day charter boat (Phase II), in which an integrated navigation and support system was demonstrated with four humans in a closed charter boat. The Life Support Systems Integration Facility, was also used during Phase II. It was a 10-day demonstration of the system technology, the air ventilation system, the water recovery system, the power for use within the International Space Station (ISS) (ISS), the navigation and medical support personnel from the Medical Science Division, the Food Service Division (FSD), and the Life Support Systems Division (LSD).
