

A man in a dark suit and glasses stands in profile, looking at a large, blank, off-white canvas that dominates the center of the frame. The canvas is hung in a workshop or studio with wooden walls and a wooden floor. A wooden ladder is visible on the right side of the canvas. The lighting is warm and slightly dim, creating a contemplative atmosphere.

Wassily Kandinsky who created the world's first abstract artwork and forever altered the course of art history or so the traditional story goes. A good story but not the full story. The Myth of Abstraction reveals that abstract art was envisioned long before Kandinsky in the pages of nineteenth century German literature. It originated from the written word described by German writers who portrayed in language what did not yet exist as art. Yet if writers were already writing about abstract art why were painters not painting it? To solve the riddle this book features the work of three canonical nineteenth century authors: Heinrich von Kleist, Johann Wolfgang von Goethe and Gottfried Keller who imagine, theorize and describe abstract art in their literary writing, sometimes warning about the revolution it will cause not just in art but in all aspects of social life. Through close readings of their textual images and visual analyses of actual paintings, Andrea Meyertholen shows how these writers anticipated the twentieth century birth of abstract art by establishing the necessary conditions for its production, reception and consumption. The first study to bring these early descriptions of abstraction together and investigate their significance. The Myth of Abstraction writes an alternative genealogy featuring the crucial role of literature in shaping abstract art in aesthetic, cultural and social terms, warning about the revolution it will cause not just in art but in all aspects of social life.
