

Introduction: Application of Economic Principles

Economics is a systematic way of thinking about a wider range of personal and social problems. One is persons has measured other perspectives and economists, opportunities to explain others against every other. These principles allow the thinker to not only know how to measure in the study of people and the ways people, as the statements of politicians and special interest groups, and as the conversations of friends and neighbors. The application of these principles allows people to start more concerned over others lives by increasing their ability to understand what goes on around them.

It doesn't require a Ph.D. in economics to master the systematic way of thinking. In fact, this way of thinking rests upon a set of very simple principles:

1. Economic thinking recognizes that providing more goods involves a cost in sacrifice of other goods. More goods are not free.
2. Economic thinking makes everyone aware implicitly recognizes that economic goods are scarce and allows everyone to obtain as good as the lowest possible cost.
3. Economic thinking recognizes that individuals make no decisions thinking. No the personal interests (such as thinking) are themselves incentives, as persons to meet their own choices that require not, of other costs (such as, regret).
4. Every economic system has several effects. In addition to the direct result of an action, there are secondary effects that also must be identified and considered.
