Growth in Highly Indebted Countries Jesko Hentschel,2012-12-06 A real imports of capital and intermediate goods declined sharply for highlyindebted countries in the 1980s these economies were faced with the need tosubstitute previously imported factors of production with domestic capital and labor The study empirically analyzes the degree of import dependence of twelve developing countries Estimates of the short run elasticity of substitution characterize both imported capital and intermediate goods to behave like complements in the production process in the developing countries Long run substitution elasticities differ considerably among the group of economies especially for imported machinery and equipment The results indicate that inward oriented strategies have not achieved the aim of reducing the import dependence of the developing economies In order to visualize the implications of the differing degree of import dependence a partial equilibrium econometric model is used to analyze the reaction of the trade account on external shocks and domestic policies in Columbia and Ecuador Simulations show that the dependence on imported production means can transform an adjustment with growth of the external account into an adjustment or growth controversy

Government-Linked Companies and Sustainable, Equitable Development Terence Gomez, François Bafoil, Kee-Cheok Cheong, 2014-11-27 The debate over how far governments should intervene in economies in order to promote economic growth a debate which from the 1980s seemed settled in favour of the neo liberal non interventionist consensus has taken on new vigour since the financial crisis of 2008 and after Some countries most of them in industrialised Asia have survived the crisis and secured equitable economic growth by adopting a developmental state model whereby governments have intervened in their economies often through explicit support for individual companies This book explores debates about government intervention assesses interventionist policies including industrial and innovation policies and examines in particular the key institutions which play a crucial role in implementing government policies and in building the bridge between the state and the private sector The countries covered include China India South Korea Malaysia and Taiwan together with representative countries from Europe and Latin America
