Many Pretty Toys Hazard Adams, 2000-02-03 When Nixon orders the bombing of Cambodia the resulting protests push a West Coast university to the brink of anarchy altering irrevocably the lives of students and faculty and disrupting the process of storytelling itself Through the words of two professors and a communal voice known only as We Hazard Adams interweaves the political literary and philosophical developments of the time into a story in which generations and their histories meet as well as literary styles and methods showing how political and intellectual events play on the consciousness of a range of characters The spirit here is serious and generous but not without a satirical element as a communal group attempts to establish an elusive identity With a remarkable breadth of method Adams deliberately evades the usual literary classifications

Home Hazard Adams, 2002-08-01 Fact meets fiction in Hazard Adams's latest novel Using an actual turn of the century anarchist commune on Washington's south Puget Sound as the backdrop Adams tells the story of Edward Williams a present day history professor and former vice president at nearby State University As he studies and imagines the lives of those who participated in the commune which came under vicious attack after the assassination of President McKinley in 1901 Williams is drawn into disputes on his campus over the proposed appointment of a distinguished feminist professor of American studies and an alleged case of sexual harassment Both comic and tragic events ensue Employing photographs taken at Home in 1902 and 2000 and parts of diaries kept by visitors to the commune Adams dramatizes the parallels and contrasts between the events of 1902 and those of 1990-91 as they are experienced by a variety of characters in both periods With Home Adams completes his fictive account of academic life in the latter half of the twentieth century begun with The Horses of Instruction set in the fifties and continued with Many Pretty Toys set in 1970-71
