

Large and Small-Scale Maps

Maps are accurate drawings of different areas of the world. Different types of maps give us different information about the area shown on the map. The scale of a map helps the reader calculate the real size and distances between places or things shown on the map.

Maps can either have a small scale or a large scale. What does that mean, and why do they use two different scales?

In reality, the Earth is so large that if we wanted to show it on a map, we would have to make the world smaller to fit it onto a map. We do this using a small-scale map. Using a small scale allows us to take something really big and shrink it down when drawing it on a map. A small-scale map shows something big but with very little detail.

Take a look at this world map. It is a small-scale map. It shows the entire world but with only a few of the details. You can't see details like rivers, cities, hospitals, and roads.

Now, take a look at this map. It is a large-scale map. It shows a small area with a lot of detail.
