Mapping The Worlds Vegetation Regionalization Of Formations And Flora Syracuse Geographical Series:

Mapping the World's Vegetation David J. De Laubenfels, 1975 Vegetation the plant content of an area is a fundamental component of the natural environment on the land surface of the earth It converts energy into food and is therefore at the base of the food chain making vegetation a key link in natural ecosystems integrating climate soil and living organisms By identifying and analyzing distinct frontiers both in vegetation formation and in world flora this book confirms that a set of formation types and distinctive floristic realms exist This makes possible for the first time rigorous definitions for formation types and for specific floristic realms More important than the clarification of boundaries is the examination of causative factors which is facilitated by the demonstration of distinct categories Thus probable causes for the origin of distinct vegetation formation types and floristic realms are offered in this book Such a fresh examination of the regionalization of vegetation of the world scale helps to put world vegetation mapping on a more satisfactory scientific basis a goal of major significance to geographers Environmentalists and ecologists will be especially interested in the research finding that the same vegetation structure recurs again and again among unrelated assemblages of plants in remote parts of the world verifying the fact that vegetation formations are distinct kinds of ecological systems Syracuse Geographical Series

, 1980 The Subtropical Vegetation of Southwestern China Cindy Q. Tang, 2015-04-27 This book provides a wealth of high quality scientific information on the patterns and processes of vegetation change across a broad range of spatial and temporal scales concentrating on Southwestern China mostly on the Yunnan region and extending to the Yangtze River valley near the boundaries separating Chongqing Sichuan and Guizhou Mapping the World's Vegetation David J. O. Box, 2012-12-06 This study arose out of the old question of what actually determines vegetation structure and distributions Is climate the overriding control as one would suppose from reading the more geographically oriented literature Or is climate only incidental as suggested by more site and or taxon oriented writers The question might be phrased more realistically How much does climate control vegetation processes structures and distributions It seemed to me as an ambitious doctoral student that one way to attempt an answer might be to try to predict world vegetation from climate alone and then compare the predicted results with actual vegetation patterns If climatic data were sufficient to reproduce the world s actual vegetation patterns then one could conclude that climate is the main control This book represents an expanded second generation version of that original thesis It presents world scale vegetation and ecoclimatic models and a methodology for applying such models to predict vegetation and for evaluating model results This approach also provides a means of geographical simulation of vegetation patterns and changes which represent necessary data inputs in other fields such as atmospheric chemistry and biogeochemical cycling It has been fairly well accepted that climatic and other environmental conditions are associated with the evolution of particular aspects of plant form convergent evolution The particular configurations of plant size photosynthetic surface area and structure e g sclerophylly stomatal resistance and their seasonal variations represent what one can recognize fairly readily as distinct growth forms
