TRANSFORMATIONS IN COMMERCE AND RELIGION

The first emperor of China's Ming dynasty (1368–1644) declared a new policy in 1368: Maritime trade would henceforth be a government monopoly.

Only countries recognized as tribute-paying vassals would be permitted to trade with China, and private trade would no longer be allowed. This new definition of the tribute trade refocused Southeast Asian polities both economically and politically. The Chinese emperor welcomed tribute missions bringing goods, information, and affirmations of loyalty; Southeast Asian portpolities with the organizational and financial resources took advantage of the

These parameters for the tribute trade lasted only about a century before

Chinese emperors abandoned state trading. But it was long enough to stimulate the development of powerful port-states throughout the region. On the mainland, Ayutthaya (in Thailand), Champa (southern Vietnam), and Cambodia and, in island Southeast Asia, Brunei, Java, and Melaka all benefited from Chinese engagement. Melaka was established about 1400 by a prince in exile from Srivijaya. On the west coast of the Malay Peninsula facing the strait that came to bear its name, Melaka (Malacca) was in a position to control maritime trade between India and China. The Ming trade edict offered the first rulers of this new port-state a timely opportunity, and they made several
