Russian Federation: Staff Report for the 2011 Article IV Consultation International Monetary Fund, 2011-09-27
The report highlights that even though the Russian economy has started reviving from the crisis, growth has been moderate and inflation high. Executive Directors have advised that the focus should be on reducing fiscal vulnerabilities, lowering inflation, promoting a stronger and more competitive banking system, and creating a favorable environment for investment and economic diversification. Directors encouraged the authorities to undertake growth-friendly, credible and ambitious fiscal consolidation. They have supported the Financial Sector Assessment Program (FSAP) recommendations to strengthen financial sector policies.

Russian Federation International Monetary Fund, 2012-08-03 The Russian Federation economy saw growth of about 4 percent and a current account surplus, the result of favorable harvest, high oil prices and reduced unemployment and inflation. Implementation of structural reforms initiated by the Central Bank of Russia (CBR) managing domestic demands and non-vulnerability to oil price variation were suggested by the Executive Board as short and mid-term challenges. Strengthening monetary policy framework allowing greater exchange rate flexibility, implementing Financial Sector Assessment Program (FSAP) recommendations, expansion of CBR powers, reduced state involvement in the economy and enhancement of communication policies were also recommended.

Executive Directors considered that Morocco's universal subsidy scheme is the most important policy issue facing the authorities. They shared the authorities' assessment of the main upside risks to inflation, including possible second-round effects from higher imported prices and
