Method in Ancient Philosophy Jyl Gentzler, 1998 Method in Ancient Philosophy brings together fifteen new specially written essays by leading scholars on a broad subject of central importance It is characteristic of human beings that they direct their activities by reasoning Methods of reasoning even toward the same ends vary Self conscious reflection on the methods of reasoning marks the beginning of philosophy in the West examination of how the ancient Greeks reasoned and how they thought about methods of reasoning helps us to see how they came to hold the views they did and how we have come to think as we do For the views of the ancients have had a considerable influence upon our own assumptions about the demarcations between different kinds of enquiry and the sorts of methods that are appropriate for them The aims of the volume are thus both exegetical and philosophical Most of the essays focus on Socrates Plato or Aristotle but earlier and later ancient philosophy is brought into the picture by essays on Eleatic and Epicurean thought

Inductive Inference and Its Natural Ground Hilary

Kornblith, 1995 Hilary Kornblith presents an account of inductive inference that addresses both its metaphysical and epistemological aspects He argues that inductive knowledge is possible by virtue of the fit between our innate psychological capacities and the causal structure of the world Kornblith begins by developing an account of natural kinds that has its origins in John Locke's work on real and nominal essences In Kornblith's view a natural kind is a stable cluster of properties that are bound together in nature The existence of such kinds serves as a natural ground of inductive inference Kornblith then examines two features of human psychology that explain how knowledge of natural kinds is attained First our concepts are structured innately in a way that presupposes the existence of natural kinds Second our native inferential tendencies tend to provide us with accurate beliefs about the world when applied to environments that are populated by natural kinds

Barris,2009-08-25 In The Crane's Walk Jeremy Barris seeks to show that we can conceive and live with a pluralism of standpoints with conflicting standards for truth with the truth of each being entirely unaffected by the truth of the others He argues that Plato's work expresses this kind of pluralism and that this pluralism is important in its own right whether or not we agree about what Plato's standpoint is The longest tradition of Plato scholarship identifies crucial faults in Plato's theory of Ideas Barris argues that Plato deliberately displayed those faults because he wanted to demonstrate that basic kinds of error or illogic have dimensions that are crucial to the establishing of truth These dimensions legitimate a paradoxical coordination of logically incompatible conceptions of truth Connecting this idea with emerging currents of Plato scholarship he emphasizes in addition to the dialogues arguments the importance of their nonargumentative features including drama myths fictions anecdotes and humor These unanalyzed nonargumentative features function rigorously as a lever with which to examine the enterprise of rational argument itself without presupposing its standards or illegitimately assimilating any position to the standards of another Today communities are torn apart by conflicts within and between a host of different pluralist and absolutist commitments The possibility developed in this book a coordination of absolute and relative truth that allows an understanding of some relativist and some absolutist positions as being fully legitimate and as capable of existing in a relation to their opposites may contribute to perspectives for resolving these conflicts iOS App Development

1050-1250 Richard Cross,2024-09-16 This book traces developments in Christology and specifically the metaphysics of the union of divine and human natures in one person from 1050 the age of Anselm of Canterbury to 1250 the age of Albert the Great During the first part of the period the key issue is the conflict between Augustine s homo assumptus assumed man Christology defended by the Victorines and that of Boethius s Chalcedonian Christology defended by Gilbert of Poitiers sometimes known as the subsistence theory By 1180 the latter of these was almost universally accepted A third view apparently accepted by Peter Lombard among others according to which it is not true that Christ as man is something the non aliquid Christology was condemned in 1177 The second part of the book traces the way in which theologians attempted to develop the presentation of Conciliar Christology by working out inchoate solutions to some of the metaphysical questions that the issue raises what is the nature of the hypostatic union between the two natures or the human nature and the divine person is it something created or something uncreated And given that the human nature is a particular substance what prevents it from being a person Theologians used insights from both of the rejected theories the homo assumptus Christology and the non aliquid Christology in attempting to answer these issues The early thirteenth century saw both the founding of the universities of Paris and Oxford and the founding of the Franciscan and Dominican orders The book explores the impact of these religious identities on the formation of Christological teaching The Liberation of Life Charles Birch,John B.
