

THE PROCESS

1. Defining the problem statement

We understand the needs of our customers first. We ask questions like how does the end product look? What raw materials do you want to use? What is your ideal cost of production targets? What speed of production and level of automation are you looking for? What are the budget constraints?

4. Prototyping Phase

Once the cost estimates and CAD drawings are approved, we start procurement of parts, fabrication and assembly in our in-house facility.

2. Developing a project charter

The project charter serves as a guiding document including targets, timelines, budgets, deliverables, constraints, and scope of the project

5. Factory Acceptance Test (FAT)

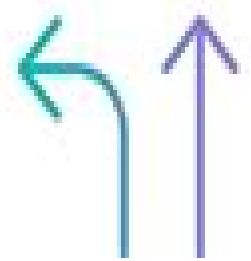

Once the machine is ready and tested internally, the customer visits our factory for a factory acceptance test, checking the machine against the deliverables in the project charter

3. Design Phase

Our in-house design team develops concept design as the first step and then a detailed CAD drawing with a Bill of Materials to give you an estimate of the project costs.

6. Dispatch and installation

This phase is similar to our other projects.

Machines With A Purpose:

Machines with a Purpose H. H. Rosenbrock, 1990 There is at present a widespread unease about the direction in which our technology is taking us apparently against our will Advances continue to damage the environment and reduce human work to the trivial mechanical repetition of actions which have no human meaning Attempts to design technology which complements rather than rejects human skills are all too often frustrated by the current scientific belief that man is a machine and what is more that he can contribute nothing that cannot equally well be contributed by a machine This challenging and stimulating book refutes four centuries of science based on strictly causal explanations It shows that man and nature can be viewed as machines with a purpose and that the advancement of technology can be to the benefit and not the detriment of the human race and the environment
