

Introduction: Application of Economic Principles

Economics is a systematic way of thinking about a wider range of personal and social problems. One is persons has measured other perspectives and dimensions, opportunities to explain others against every other. These principles allow the thinker to not only answer these questions in the daily aspects of the work world, in the statements of politicians and special interest groups, and in the conversations of friends and neighbors. The application of these principles allows people to start more concerned over their lives by increasing their ability to understand what goes on around them.

It doesn't require a Ph.D. in economics to master the systematic way of thinking. In fact, this way of thinking rests upon a set of very simple principles:

1. Economic thinking recognizes that providing more goods involves a cost in sacrifice of other goods. More goods are not free.
2. Economic thinking makes decisions about how to allocate resources that economic goods are scarce and allows answers to them as good as the limited possible cost.
3. Economic thinking recognizes that individuals make no decisions thinking. No the personal interests that choosing an alternative interest, a person to meet their or choose that option or, if other costs increase, reject it.
4. Every economic system has several effects. In addition to the direct result of an action, there are secondary effects that also must be identified and considered.

quarter century has witnessed significant changes in agricultural policies in OECD countries. Although total support remains high, a shift has taken place from price-linked measures to direct income support, most notably in the European Union. Policies have been adapted to meet pressing social concerns such as ensuring food security and improving environmental quality. OECD countries face major economic issues due to the ageing of their populations and the need to adapt to globalization and increasing competition from emerging economies. Continued pressure to reform agricultural policies will be exerted by the need to economize on the use of scarce public resources. At the same time, agriculture faces new challenges generated by climate change, the greening of the economy, increasing scarcity of energy and water, and the demands placed on the food system by an expanding world population.
