The literature is still one of our biggest frustrations to day There is in one sense too much of it and in another not enough for there are insufficient and inadequate published guidelines through this jungle Last year two excellent books for students of ecological chemistry were published one in France and one in England The concordance of the references was a mere overall 3% rising to 7% in the chapters on pheromones Even in the computer age the channel remains a formidable barrier to the rapid exchange of biological information At the present time we are in urgent need of compilations similar to John Feltwell's The Large White Butterfly since the literature has become virtually unmanageable This insect is now a demonstration object in the sixth form schoolroom an experimental rabbit in the University laboratory a test animal in virus and bacterial research projects a tool for the study of flight mechanisms migration plant biochemistry hormones genetics allergies pigments mimicry etc etc John Feltwell has by this massive compilation rendered us a great service in fact he has given us a present of 4 000 hours of library time spent in 50 different libraries in seven countries In the process he has collected 8000 references to the Large White Of these 4000 have been selected and we are given a brief indication of their contents The Moths and Butterflies of Great Britain and Ireland: Micropterigidae-Heliozelidae John Heath, A. Bland, 1976 Each volume in this series contains introductory chapters on important aspects of the study of British Lepidoptera keys to families and species and a full description details of life history and a distribution map for each species as well as structural drawings where necessary *Colour Identification Guide to Caterpillars of the British Isles.
