Cultural Identity, on a Daily Basis Lisette A. García, 2001 The current series of studies set out to investigate the relationship between cultural membership an individual s self concept and preferences particularly in regard to her or his collective identity It was found that culture effected preference patterns in two ways First consistent with the Kim and Markus s 2000 findings when a link between the object of choice and the individual is made explicit culture effected the type of pencil choice an individual made In this situation participants from individualistic cultures tended to make a unique pencil choice while participants from collectivistic cultures did not Secondly culture also appears to have moderated the effects of the in group out group distinction on preference patterns when no link between individual and the object of choice existed This is exemplified by the fact that only the choice patterns of the participants from the collectivistic culture type varied as a function of whether the choice had been offered by someone sharing their culture type or not The implications of these results for current models of cultural preference patterns and collective identity are discussed
