Friedlaender, 2007-04-19 The broad arc of islands north of Australia that extends from Indonesia east towards the central Pacific is home to a set of human populations whose concentration of diversity is unequaled elsewhere Approximately 20% of the worlds languages are spoken here and the biological and genetic heterogeneity among the groups is extraordinary Anthropologist W W Howells once declared diversity in the region so Protean as to defy analysis However this book can now claim considerable success in describing and understanding the origins of the genetic and linguistic variation there In order to cut through this biological knot the authors have applied a comprehensive battery of genetic analyses to an intensively sampled set of populations and have subjected these and complementary linguistic data to a variety of phylogenetic analyses This has revealed a number of heretofore unknown ancient Pleistocene genetic variants that are only found in these island populations and has also identified the genetic footprints of more recent migrants from Southeast Asia who were the ancestors of the Polynesians The book lays out the very complex structure of the variation within and among the islands in this relatively small region and a number of explanatory models are tested to see which best account for the observed pattern of genetic variation here The results suggest that a number of commonly used models of evolutionary divergence are overly simple in their assumptions and that often human diversity has accumulated in very complex ways

The Evolution of Personality and Individual

Differences Dr. David M. Buss, Dr. Patricia H. Hawley, 2010-11-24 Capturing a scientific change in thinking about personality and individual differences that has been building over the past 15 years this volume stands at an important moment in the development of psychology as a discipline. Rather than viewing individual differences as merely the raw material upon which selection operates the contributing authors provide theories and empirical evidence which suggest that personality and individual differences are central to evolved psychological mechanisms and behavioral functioning. The book draws theoretical inspiration from life history theory evolutionary genetics molecular genetics developmental psychology personality psychology and evolutionary psychology while utilizing the theories of the best and the brightest international scientists working on this cutting edge paradigm shift. In the first of three sections the authors analyze personality and the adaptive landscape here the authors offer a novel conceptual framework for examining personality assessment adaptations. Because individuals in a social environment have momentous consequences for creating and solving adaptive problems humans have evolved difference detecting mechanisms designed to make crucial social decisions such as mate selection friend selection kin investment coalition formation and hierarchy negotiation. In the second section the authors examine developmental and life history theoretical perspectives to explore the origins and development of personality over the lifespan. The third section focuses on the relatively new field of evolutionary genetics and explores which of the major evolutionary forces such as balancing selection mutation co evolutionary arms races and drift are responsible for the origins of personality and individual differences. Existing as a seminal work in the newly emerging evolutionary psychology field this book is a must read for anyone invested in the development of psychology as a field.
