This book examines translations of Icelandic sagas and the Victorian and Edwardian children's literature they inspired some of which are canonical while others are forgotten It covers authors like William Morris Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Thomas Gray Walter Scott H Rider Haggard W H Auden John Greenleaf Whittier and more In lavish volumes and modest schoolbooks British and American writers claimed Nordic heritage and explored Nordic traditions The sagas offered a rich and wide ranging source for these authors Volsunga saga's Sigurd the dragon slayer King Olaf's saga of opposing Nordic Gods and Christianity Frithiof's model of headstrong youth beset with unfair opposition and lost love Grettir and Njal tell of men who accepted fate and met conflict and enemies unflinchingly Aslaug Gudrida Hallberga and Hervar exerted remarkable influence and Eric the Red and Leif the Lucky provided Americans with a Nordic heritage of discovery Reading for Realism Nancy Glazener, 1997 Reading for Realism presents a new approach to U S literary history that is based on the analysis of dominant reading practices rather than on the production of texts Nancy Glazener's focus is the realist novel the most influential literary form of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries a form she contends was only made possible by changes in the expectations of readers about pleasure and literary value By tracing readers' collaboration in the production of literary forms Reading for Realism turns nineteenth century controversies about the realist romance and sentimental novels into episodes in the history of readership It also shows how works of fiction by Rebecca Harding Davis Henry James Nathaniel Hawthorne and others participated in the debates about literary classification and reading that in turn created and shaped their audiences Combining reception theory with a materialist analysis of the social formations in which realist reading practices circulated Glazener's study reveals the elitist underpinnings of literary realism At the book's center is the Atlantic group of magazines whose influence was part of the cultural machinery of the Northeastern urban bourgeoisie and crucial to the development of literary realism in America Glazener shows how the promotion of realism by this group of publications also meant a consolidation of privilege primarily in terms of class gender race and region for the audience it served Thus American realism so often portrayed as a quintessentially populist form actually served to enforce existing structures of class and power Narrative Structure and Reader Formation in Lady Mary Wroth's Urania Rahel Orgis, 2016-12-01

Narrative Structure and Reader Formation in Lady Mary Wroth's Urania offers the first systematic formal and thematic analysis of Wroth's Urania in its historical context and explores the structural means by which Wroth fashions her readership The book thus has a dual focus at once on narrative art and reader formation It makes two original claims the first being that the Urania is not the unorganized accumulation of stories critics have tended to present it as but a work of sophisticated narrative structures i e a complex text in a positive sense These structures are revealed by means of a circumspect narratological analysis of the formal and thematic patterns that organise the Urania Such an analysis furthers our understanding of the reading strategies that Wroth encourages The second claim is then that through the careful structuring of her text Wroth seeks to create her own ideal readership More precisely the formal and thematic structures of the Urania engage with readers expectations inviting them to reflect on prominent thematic issues and respond to the text as what early modern prefaces term good readers Combining narratological methods with a generic perspective and taking into account the work of book historians on early modern reading practices this monograph provides a new approach to the Urania supplementing the typically gender or auto biographically oriented interpretations of the romance Moreover it contributes to the study of early modern prose narrative and romance and exemplifies how historically contextualised narratological analysis may yield new insights and profit research on reading strategies Texts Of Desire Linda

Radway, 2000-11-09 Deftly melding ethnography cultural history literary criticism and autobiographical reflection A Feeling for Books is at once an engaging study of the Book of the Month Club s influential role as a cultural institution and a profoundly personal meditation about the experience of reading Janice Radway traces the history of the famous mail order book club from its controversial founding in 1926 through its evolution into an enterprise uniquely successful in blending commerce and culture Framing her historical narrative with writing of a more personal sort Radway reflects on the contemporary role of the Book of the Month Club in American cultural history and in her own life Her detailed account of the standards and practices employed by the club's in-house editors is also an absorbing story of her interactions with those editors Examining her experiences as a fourteen-year-old reader of the club's selections and later as a professor of literature she offers a series of rigorously analytical yet deeply personal readings of such beloved novels as Marjorie Morningstar and To Kill a Mockingbird Rich and rewarding this book will captivate and delight anyone who is interested in the history of books and in the personal and transformative experience of reading

Reading the Romance Janice A. Radway, 2009-11-18 Originally published in 1984 Reading the Romance challenges popular and often demeaning myths about why romantic fiction one of publishing's most lucrative categories captivates millions of women readers Among those who have disparaged romance reading are feminists literary critics and theorists of mass culture They claim that romances enforce the woman reader's dependence on men and acceptance of the repressive ideology purveyed by popular culture Radway questions such claims arguing that critical attention must shift from the text itself taken in isolation to the complex social event of reading She examines that event from the complicated business of publishing and distribution to the individual reader's engagement with the text Radway's provocative approach combines reader response criticism with anthropology and feminist psychology Asking readers themselves to explore their reading motives habits and rewards she conducted interviews in a midwestern town with forty-two romance readers whom she met through Dorothy Evans a chain bookstore employee who has earned a reputation as an expert on romantic fiction Evans defends her customers' choice of entertainment reading romances she tells Radway is no more harmful than watching sports on television We read books so we won't cry is the poignant explanation one woman offers for her reading habit Indeed Radway found that while the women she studied devote themselves to nurturing their families these wives and mothers receive insufficient devotion or nurturance in return In romances the women find not only escape from the demanding and often tiresome routines of their lives but also a hero who supplies the tenderness and admiring attention that they have learned not to expect The heroines admired by Radway's group defy the expected stereotypes they are strong independent and intelligent That such characters often find themselves to be victims of male aggression and almost always resign themselves to accepting conventional roles in life has less to do Radway argues with the women readers' fantasies and choices than with their need to deal with a fear of masculine dominance These romance readers resent not only the limited choices in their own lives but the patronizing attitude that men especially express toward their reading tastes In fact women read romances both to protest and to escape temporarily the narrowly defined role prescribed for them by a patriarchal culture Paradoxically the books that they read make conventional roles for women seem desirable It is this complex relationship between culture text and woman reader that Radway urges feminists to address Romance readers she argues should be encouraged to deliver their protests in the arena of actual social relations rather than to act them out in the solitude of the imagination In a new introduction Janice Radway places the book within the context of current scholarship and offers both an explanation and critique of the study's limitations

Romancing the Self in Early Modern Englishwomen's Life Writing Julie A. Eckerle, 2016-04-01 Juxtaposing life writing and romance this study offers the first book length exploration of the dynamic and complex relationship between the two genres In so doing it operates at the intersection of several recent trends interest in women's contributions to autobiography greater awareness of the diversity and flexibility of auto biographical forms in the early modern period and the use of manuscripts and other material evidence to trace literacy practices Through analysis of a wide variety of life writings by early modern Englishwomen including Elizabeth Delaval Dorothy Calthorpe Ann Fanshawe and Anne Halkett Julie A Eckerle demonstrates that these women were not only familiar with the controversial romance genre but also deeply influenced by it Romance she argues with its unending tales of unsatisfying love spoke to something in women's experience offered a model by which they could recount their own disappointments in a world where arranged marriage and often loveless matches ruled the day and exerted a powerful pervasive pressure on their textual self formations Romancing the Self in Early Modern Englishwomen's Life Writing documents a vibrant secular form of auto biographical writing that coexisted alongside numerous spiritual forms providing a much more nuanced and complete understanding of sixteenth and seventeenth century women's reading and writing literacies

Travel, Time, and Space in the Middle Ages and Early Modern Time Albrecht Classen, 2018-10-22 Research on medieval and early modern travel literature has made great progress which now allows us to take the next step and to analyze the correlations between the individual and space throughout time which contributed essentially to identity formation in many different settings The contributors to this volume engage with a variety of pre modern texts images and other documents related to travel and the individual's self orientation in foreign lands and make an effort to determine the concept of identity within a spatial framework often determined by the meeting of various cultures Moreover objects images and words can also travel and connect people from different worlds through books The volume thus brings together new scholarship focused on the interrelationship of travel space time and individuality which also includes of course women s movement through the larger world whether in concrete terms or through proxy travel via readings Travel here is also examined with respect to craftsmen s activities at various sites artists employment for many different projects all over Europe and elsewhere and in terms of metaphysical experiences catabasis
