Wellington Bookhart, 2023-10-10 The Aestheticization of History and the Butterfly Effect Visual Arts Series introduces the audience to philosophical concepts that broach the beginning of the history of Western thought in Plato and Aristotle to that of more modern thought in the theoretician Jacques Rancière in which the main conceptual framework of this anthology is predicated. The introduction is mainly concerned with Rancière's concept of the distribution of the sensible which is the arrangement of things accessible to our senses what we experience in real time and space compartmentalization and categorization of all things. These things do not just involve tangible items but audible speech written language and visibilities. Rancière's theory of the regimes of art is undertaken as the unfolding of the distribution. Such is evoked in the various genres of visual art forms from two dimensional paintings to three dimensional sculptures and architectures. Understanding the aesthetic regime of art is crucial for grasping how art performs time travel. One way of understanding this phenomenon is in terms of embodied philosophy imbued vis vis art forms which are subsequently challenged by contemporary artists. The contributing essays examine these reiterations reevaluations performances. Aesthetics is a term deriving from the 18th century European Enlightenment. It is here that aesthetics as the study of beauty is probed for its political potential after the failure of the French Revolution. Many major thinkers during this period signed on to the aesthetic moment recognizing that Reason in its present state failed to develop humankind beyond barbarism. J E B Stuart's statue is part of an equestrian theme that approximates the Western canon of power and class in the pursuit of domination. But such power and domination will be dethroned in the restaging of history and the redistribution of said canon. This reimagining of the form not only alters perception but constitutes a new narrative. Looking and Listening Brenda Lynne

Leach, 2014-11-13 Looking and Listening Conversations between Modern Art and Music invites the art and music lover to place these two realms of creative endeavor into an open dialog. Although the worlds of music and visual art often seem to take separate paths they are usually parallel. Conductor and art connoisseur Brenda Leach takes unique pairings of well known visual art works and musical compositions from the twentieth century to identify the shared sources of inspiration as well as similarities in theme style and technique to explore the historical and cultural influences on the great artists and composers in the twentieth century. Looking and Listening asks and answers What does jazz have in common with paintings by Stuart Davis and Piet Mondrian. How did Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue affect the work of artist Arthur Dove. How did painter Georgia O'Keeffe and composer Aaron Copland capture the spirit of a youthful America entering the twentieth century. What did Kandinsky and Schoenberg share in their artistic visions. Leach takes readers on a whirlwind tour of the lives of these artists surveying many of the key movements in the twentieth century by comparing representative works from the modern masters of the visual arts and music. Leach's refreshing and innovation approach will interest those passionate about twentieth century art and music and is ideal for any student or instructor museum docent or music programmer seeking to draw the lines of connection between these two art forms. The Blues and Jazz Artist as Warrior Pasquale De
