Thomas Edward Payne, David Weber

Sarcee Grammar:

A Sarcee Grammar Eung-Do Cook, 2011-11-01 Likely to become one of the classic works in Amerindian linguistics this book presents a comprehensive grammar of Sarcee an Athapaskan language spoken in southern Alberta Based on the voluminous notes collected by Edward Sapir in 1922 and supplemented by extensive data from Cook's own work with the few remaining speakers of Sarcee the book not only deals with all major areas of linguistic structure but also offers insights into linguistic changes which have occurred during this century Primarily descriptive with numerous examples drawn from text materials to support claims about grammatical structure or rule the book also contains many accounts of Sarcee and Athapaskan data which bear significantly on current theoretical issues Although the overall approach is generative transformational the material is presented in contemporary analytical and descriptive terminology Preceded by an introduction defining the orthographic conventions and abbreviations used throughout the book the following chapters are devoted to a thorough discussion of syntax phonology and morphology The chapters on syntax constitute the only in depth presentation of such material for any northern Athapaskan language A major documentation of the geographically and linguistically important Sarcee language this book will be welcomed by scholars in Athapaskan studies as well as by linguists in general as a significant contribution to the general knowledge of language and linguistic theory

Contrast and Representations in Syntax Bronwyn M. Bjorkman, Daniel Currie Hall, 2020-10-05 This book explores how grammatical oppositions for instance the contrast between present and past tense are represented in the syntax of natural languages The nature of syntactic contrast is tied to a fundamental question in generative syntactic theory what is universal in syntax and what is variable The chapters in this volume examine the dual role of features which both define a set of paradigmatic contrasts and act as the building blocks of syntactic structures and the drivers of syntactic operations In both of these roles features are increasingly considered the locus of parametric variation This identification of parameters with features has opened up new possibilities for investigating connections between the morphological system of a language and its syntax and suggests a new role for featural contrast in syntactic theory The contributors to this volume address these two major questions from a range of perspectives drawing on data from a variety of typologically diverse languages including Blackfoot Greek Onondaga and Scottish Gaelic

Morphology Now Mark Aronoff,1992-01-01 Several distinct general linguistic theories are represented here autolexical theory categorial grammar functional grammar and government and binding syntax Each essay in this book is centered around a point of morphological theory and each one is designed to further the development of that theory and hence linguistic theory in general Many different languages are analyzed Sino Tibetan Manipuri Eskimo Central Siberian Upik Athabaskan Ahtna Latin modern European languages and English All of these sometimes dramatically different language systems are treated as manifestations of a single unified human language faculty and these studies of generative morphology are incorporated into linguistic theory and the explanation of diversity in human language
