International Law for Seagoing Officers, 6th Edition Craig H Allen, 2014-05-15. For those who operate on under and over the sea, international law can sometimes be as complex as it is important. Written by the same former seagoing officer and maritime law professional who authored the current edition of Farwell's Rules of the Nautical Road, this book was designed to bring clarity and context to international law for the seagoing professional. Following an introduction to public international law and a short history of the law of the sea, the book describes the rules that apply in ports and in the adjacent maritime zones, including the territorial sea, exclusive economic zone, archipelagic waters and the high seas. A highlight of the book are the chapters that focus on the subjects of greatest interest to the seagoing professional, including military and intelligence activities in the maritime domain, maritime law enforcement activities and the use of force at sea. The appendices include the text of the 1982 UN Convention on the Law of the Sea. Whether an academy cadet, a midshipman, a seasoned commanding officer or a master mariner, readers of this thorough and timely book will be rewarded with a far greater understanding of the international laws that govern ships and mariners at sea.

The Legal Regime of Straits Hugo Caminos, Vincent P. Cogliati-Bantz, 2014-12-22. An account of the legal regime of straits and the allocation of rights and duties relating to transit passage.

International Straits Ana G. López Martín, 2010-08-14. The four 1958 Geneva Conventions on the Law of the Sea, which codified and progressively developed this sector of our legislation, were rather ephemeral despite the fact that they were constituent Conventions. In fact, the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) again undertook the same task with the same spirit. 20 years later, after a long drawn-out global negotiation process in which all the marine areas and problems pending were analysed and discussed by the countries attending and an apparently strengthened majority was attained, including the essential agreement between the principal naval powers and the third world countries, symbolised most grossly in the recognition of exclusive economic areas which were 200 miles wide in exchange for a significant alteration to the legal rules applicable to the international straits. From 1973 to 1982, the negotiations showed that there were a number of particular factors affecting the seas: strait countries, user countries, long range shipping countries, embedded countries, archipelagic countries, broad platform countries, etc. In 1982, when the UNCLOS was adopted, it seemed to be a text with justified pretensions to be in force for a long period of time, as the nine years of negotiations required for its adoption had taken into account the main problems pending agreement, although not absolutely all.

Navigational Rights and Freedoms and the New Law of the Sea Donald R. Rothwell, Sam Bateman, 2021-10-18. Navigational rights and freedoms have been central to the development of the law of the sea since the original debates over whether the seas were open or closed to maritime traffic. The 1982 UN Convention on the Law of the Sea recognises the legitimate rights of coastal states to proclaim sovereignty and assert jurisdiction over vast areas of maritime space. In return, maritime states are given a range of navigational rights over waters ranging from the territorial sea through to the high sea. The new regime of the law of the sea created by the Convention presents an opportunity to review developments in the law of navigational rights and freedoms. This book assesses the navigational regime established by the 1982 Convention with emphasis given to the continuing importance of the freedom of the seas. Navigation in the territorial sea and international straits is reviewed especially in the Straits of Malacca and Singapore and the Torres Strait. Archipelagic navigation from the perspective of two claimant states, Indonesia and the Philippines, and a user state, South Korea, is also considered. The interaction of environmental concerns with navigational rights is an important feature of the current law of the sea regime with relevant conventions assessed and the role of the International Maritime Organization in developing navigational standards considered. Both European and Canadian practice in the protection of sensitive marine environments and the impact upon navigational rights is also considered. Finally, the roles of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and the International Maritime Organization in dispute resolution are reviewed before a concluding consideration of the future for navigational rights and freedoms in the twenty-first century.
