Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs,1974 Evolution of global agrifood trade and trade policy and implications for nutrition Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2025-02-11

While international agrifood trade is critically relevant for the availability and supply of food across many countries import tariffs are a policy instrument with relatively modest potential to steer consumers towards purchasing more nutritious food Employing a number of newly developed datasets this research project examines patterns and developments in the links between agrifood trade and nutrition and assesses how trade policy shapes food prices The analysis is undertaken at a global level with a focus on the Near East and North Africa NENA region a set of countries which is particularly dependent on agrifood imports The results show that agrifood imports are a critical source of calories macro nutrients as well as vitamins and minerals for most countries in the world On the supply side a small number of countries account for the bulk of globally traded calories and nutrients These findings show that calorie and nutrient availabilities are shaped significantly by global trade With regard to how import tariffs affect the relative prices of foods with different nutritional characteristics econometric estimations suggest that on average import tariffs have only a relatively modest effect on the relative prices of different foods The concentration patterns of caloric and nutrient supply in a small number of supplying countries reinforce calls to diversify global food markets and trade As for trade policy options the modest effects of tariffs suggest that exploring other domestic and trade policy options would be necessary to significantly improve nutritional outcomes The political economy of food and nutrition policies Per Pinstrup-Andersen,1993-01-01 Few nutritionists and economists fully appreciate how the political environment shapes policy and subsequently affects the relevance of their policy recommendations When governments fail to follow the recommendations of nutritionists and economists and are unable to design and implement cost effective nutrition programs and policies it is often attributed to politics or to lack of political will on the part of decisionmakers Past nutrition planning efforts frequently failed to understand the goals and behavior of the various agents and institutions inside and outside the government that in the final analysis determine whether the planning effort is successful In The Political Economy of Food and Nutrition Policies Per Pinstrup Andersen brings together a group of distinguished authorities to improve the understanding of how nutrition policies are formulated within larger political and economic contexts and how public sector agencies behave with regard to food and nutrition Scaling Up Nutrition in the Arab Republic of Egypt Christopher H.
