Pacifism And War 8 Prominent Christians Debate Today's Issues:

Sit on Our Hands, or Stand on Our Feet? Roger Philip Abbott, 2013-01-07 The aim of Sit on Our Hands or Stand on Our Feet is not to present a theology that explains disasters. In fact, there is no such theology. Nor is this work primarily for those who are responded to; it is not part of the theological grab bag that Christian responders carry with them to use for the benefit of casualties. It is more a part of the Christian's engaged practical theological apprenticeship prior to and during a response. This book represents the role of the practical theologian who empowers the church community's legitimation and contribution in disaster response and who encourages individual Christians whose calling into particularly relevant professions whose natural skills and/or professional training could find them placed in a major incident responding status paid or voluntary doing their work as unto the Lord. It is a serious must read for any Christians who have hearts heavy with compassion but who are not sure what to do or why when disaster strikes. United States Institute of Peace in Brief

, 1989 Readings in Christian Ethics David K. Clark, Robert V. Rakestraw, 1994 Ethical interpretations meet real life. Case studies and readings explore divergent views on morals in action. Religion and the Politics of Peace and Conflict Linda Hogan, Dylan Lee Lehrke, 2009-01-01 The connections between religion and violence are complex and multifaceted. From the conflicts in the Middle East and the Balkans to those in Southeast Asia and beyond, religion frames and legitimates political violence. Moreover, in international relations since 9/11, religious language and metaphors have acquired a new significance. In this context, the emerging consensus appears to be not only that violence is intrinsic to religion but also that religions incite legitimate and intensify political violence. However, such an unambiguous indictment of religions is incomplete in that it fails both to appreciate significant counter examples and to recognize the diversity that exists within religions on the issue of violence, particularly the religious roots of pacifism and the ethics of non violence. This collection explores aspects of this ambivalence between religion and violence. It focuses on traditions of legitimation and pacifism within the three monotheistic religions: Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, and concludes with an examination of this ambivalence as it unfolds in each tradition's engagement with the politics of gender. The essays in this collection suggest that the tasks of ameliorating irrational fears and encouraging the recognition of irreducible interreligious complementarity are tasks that can and should be shared by Christianity, Judaism, and Islam. Moreover, these traditions are replete with exemplars both historical and contemporary who witness to the possibilities for interreligious dialogue and understanding. For religious persons, undoubtedly, these issues are particularly challenging since they require us to confront the complexities and limitations of our own traditions while also responding to their often radical demands. Yet in these complexities lie the possibilities for the religions to develop a greater sense of mutual understanding since it is in these complexities that the commonalities between the religions on the matter of political violence are found.
