Encountering Islam on the First Crusade Nicholas Morton, 2016-07-14 The First Crusade 1095-9 has often been characterised as a head to head confrontation between the forces of Christianity and Islam For many it is the campaign that created a lasting rupture between these two faiths Nevertheless is such a characterisation borne out by the sources Engagingly written and supported by a wealth of evidence Encountering Islam on the First Crusade offers a major reinterpretation of the crusaders attitudes towards the Arabic and Turkic peoples they encountered on their journey to Jerusalem Nicholas Morton considers how they interpreted the new peoples civilizations and landscapes they encountered sights for which their former lives in Western Christendom had provided little preparation Morton offers a varied picture of cross cultural relations depicting the Near East as an arena in which multiple protagonists were pitted against each other Some were fighting for supremacy others for their religion and many simply for survival

The conflict and contact between Muslims and Christians in the Middle Ages is among the most important but least appreciated developments of the period from the seventh to the fourteenth century Michael Frassetto argues that the relationship between these two faiths during the Middle Ages was essential to the cultural and religious developments of Christianity and Islam even as Christians and Muslims often found themselves engaged in violent conflict Frassetto traces the history of those conflicts and argues that these holy wars helped create the identity that defined the essential characteristics of Christians and Muslims The polemic works that often accompanied these holy wars was important Frassetto contends because by defining the essential evil of the enemy Christian authors were also defining their own beliefs and practices Holy war was not the only defining element of the relationship between Christians and Muslims during the Middle Ages and Frassetto explains that everyday contacts between
