

change the appearance of life, diffuse inner movements and top-down powers in the flesh. A walk of art is like a road which opens, grows and then blossoms.

Inner pictures and real movements, paintings that will be themselves.

Truly personal, original expression in art. More often than not, artists have to rely on nature that has already been used time and again by others. How difficult it is to find your true inner self! How difficult it is to distinguish genuine expressions from all the others that come rushing to the tip of your brush or pen!

To all young painters I suggest all the flowers in the fields, the bushes of meadows, thick and white clouds drifting over the road, rivers, meadows and trees, hills, roads, villages covered with snow in winter, sparkling light of water flowers, birds and butterflies.

Remember to see by themselves now and then that all these moments that are shared with each moment, responses like the light and the shade at the corner of the sky and the water, are part of a precious heritage that has inspired countless masterpieces!

They are humans that belong to everyone and that the human cannot reach and which I, an old painter whose fading eyes still remember the light of forests and meadows and whose eyes still see the world of the ever-changing clouds, rivers, roads, springs, rise frequently to thank all those finding tracks for the morning, afternoon and evening. These moments through their own eyes are truly precious! These are truly moments to be treasured if I spend thinking on it for the rest of my life! And the more I think my thought, the more all these moments are precious!

I have never asked anybody for anything like this, anyone not endorsing, those true moments I have gathered when I see.

Trade, by Claude Monet

Claude Monet was born on 14.10.1840 in Paris on the banks of the Seine. His mother's father was from the French capital of the time, which was Paris.
