Women Can't Paint Helen Gørrill, 2020-02-06 In 2013 Georg Baselitz declared that women don't paint very well Whilst shocking his comments reveal what Helen Gørrill argues is prolific discrimination in the artworld In a groundbreaking study of gender and value Gørrill proves that there are few aesthetic differences in men and women's painting but that men's art is valued at up to 80 per cent more than women's Indeed the power of masculinity is such that when men sign their work it goes up in value yet when women sign their work it goes down Museums the author attests are also complicit in this vicious cycle as they collect tokenist female artwork which impinges upon its artists market value An essential text for students and teachers Gørrill's book is provocative and challenges existing methodologies whilst introducing shocking evidence She proves how the price of being a woman impacts upon all forms of artistic currency be it social cultural or economic and in the vanguard of the Me Too movement calls for the artworld to take action exclusion of women from the artistic canon The Art Experience presupposes no prior knowledge of philosophy or art and it will be of interest to any reader seeking an accessible and engaging introduction to this field Along the way readers learn how philosophical theories can affect our real world experiences with painting music theater and many other art forms Key Features Accessible for any college student assumes no knowledge of philosophy art theory or any artistic medium Organizes topics conceptually rather than historically allowing students to more easily grasp the core issues themselves rather than tracing their historical evolution Offers readers a large number of contemporary examples and a consistent focus on the way theory can affect people s real world experiences with art Explores questions about bias for example whether the artistic canon has excluded some groups unfairly and whether definitions of art are Western biased
