

Teaching Nutrition In Early Childhood

Helping young children develop a positive relationship with food and understand how food supports their growing bodies

As with so many other aspects of early childhood, these are foundational years for children to develop their self-image and understanding of health and wellness. Food marketing targets children and many unhelpful messages regarding food, diet, and overall health, are prevalent in society. Even well-meaning tactics can be hurtful when we do not consider developmental appropriateness, cultural relevance, economic status and more. Let us look at how we can create more healthful, helpful ways to talk to kids about food.
