The Fallen Angel Sally Mitchell, 1981 Discusses the figure of the unchaste woman in a wide range of fiction written between 1835 and 1880 including serious novels by Dickens Mrs Gaskell and George Eliot popular novels that provided light reading for middle class women sensational fiction propaganda for social reform and stories in cheap periodicals which reached a different and far wider audience than either serious or popular novels During these years some women were struggling to become women instead of the angels of purity that sentimental morality had made of them The sexual woman the whore the mistress the runaway wife the seduced or fallen innocent all attracted a cluster of ideas about the differences between women and men about the power structure in sexual relationships and about women's place in the social and moral world In considering these topics this book traces women and illuminates differences in the fiction writer for different social classes Publisher description Seductive Forms Ros Ballaster,1992-07-02

Historicist and feminist accounts of the rise of the novel have neglected the phenomenon of the professional woman writer in England prior to the advent of the sentimental novel in the 1740s Seductive Forms explores the means by which the three leading Tory women novelists of the late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries challenged and reworked both contemporary gender ideologies and generic convention The seduction plot provided Aphra Behn Delarivier Manley and Eliza Haywood with a vehicle for dramatizing their own appropriation of the masculine power of fiction making Seduction is employed in these fictions as a metaphor for both novelistic production the seduction of the reader by the writer and party political machination the seduction of the public by the politician This challenging and lively book also explores the debts early prose fiction owed to French seventeenth century models of fiction writing and argues that Behn Manley and Haywood succeed in producing a distinctively English and female form for the amatory novel Seduction and Power Silke
