To The Director

A Mass during the Classical era provided an avenue through which composers could use various compositional styles and techniques for chorus and orchestra. This arrangement of Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor is jubilant and majestic in character and polyphonic in texture.

In the opening theme, some separation of the quarter and eighth notes is warranted to help open the texture so that all parts can be heard distinctly. The second theme, with its longer note values suggests more legato and connected bowing. Contrast is the overriding element as the music alternates between the two themes. Some balance issues may be prevalent when the cello and bass double the bass line, and when the 2nd Violas are divisi. The music is not fast but should be full of energy with each part being heard and making its contribution to the unified whole.
