

Reading Strategies

Before Reading

Predict—Check out the headings, bold fonts, and any diagrams in a chapter. Skim it and guess what the chapter may be about.

During Reading

Question—Raise questions as you read. Write down words you don't know and look them up in the dictionary. Be skeptical about an author's claims; think of yourself as an investigator. Did the author prove what he or she said? How? Did the author write something you don't understand? Can you guess what he or she meant based on the context?

Visualize—Slowly read any parts where there are phrases with sensory details, such as sight, sound, touch, smell, and taste. Give yourself a second to imagine them in your own way.

Make Connections—Consider how you relate to the text you are reading. What does it make you think about from your life, work, or other readings, films, or media?

After Reading

Summarize—Write a few sentences on what an article, chapter, or passage was about to help you remember what you read.

React—How do you interpret the material? What is your response to the text? What is left to be desired? What did it show you? What more do you know or want to know about? Do you think the author is right or wrong? Why?

This book critically refines and adds depth to current understandings and practices in EAP (English for Academic Purposes) and EMI (English Medium Instruction) using empirical research examining the experiences of English language learning and use of undergraduate and postgraduate international students in the UK. The author illuminates the language learning that takes place in and around English medium higher education settings both formally and informally with a specific focus on courses with a creative or professional practice orientation. Drawing on theoretical insights from socio-cultural Second Language Acquisition, this volume capitalises on the synergies between applied linguistics and higher education research to paint a richer picture of the interactions facilitating student growth as confident and competent communicators in globalised academic and professional settings. Perspectives on Indigenous Students' Reading Performance Gui Ying Annie Yang-Heim, 2023-03-21. This book explores the contextual, particularly cultural, related factors that may impact reading outcomes of young Indigenous learners in their early years, underpinned by the conceptual framework of cultural capital originated by Bourdieu. By drawing upon a participatory and exploratory case study conducted at a regional school in Australia over a period of six months, it highlights the challenges that Indigenous students face in reading and how the contextual factors contribute to Indigenous students' development in reading skills and their reading performance. This book helps readers to gain a better and deeper understanding of Indigenous culture, the importance of the role that culture plays in Indigenous children's literacy education, and how it shapes the way they learn and think. Neuroscience, Learning and Educational Psychology María Jesús Luque
