offers a pioneering overview of early literacy provision in different parts of the world and brings together interdisciplinary research evidence on effective literacy teaching to inform current and future practice and policy of early literacy. From the problem of identification of literacy difficulties in a particular learning context to supporting the provision of early literacy through digital media, the handbook deals with the major concerns and newest areas of interest in literacy research. With an international and future vision, it provides an accessible guide to the main debates and future trends in the global field of early literacy and informs academics, policy makers, practitioners, educators and students about innovative early literacy research methods and instruction. The three sections and 30 ground-breaking chapters reflect a conceptual framework of questions asked by scholars and educators interested in looking beyond traditional definitions of literacy. Part I provides contemporary insights collected by internationally renowned scholars on what literacy is and what it can offer to young children in the twenty-first century. Part II is a collection of detailed portraits of 14 countries, regions or language communities and focuses on early literacy provision, practice and policy from across the world. Part III outlines key interventions and research-endorsed practices designed to support home-school connections and children's reading and writing skills, as well as vocabulary, phonological awareness and narrative abilities, with examples drawn from various home-school and community environments. All chapters promote discussion, critical analysis and questions for reflection and are written in jargon-free language in an easy-to-use, themed format. This handbook is an indispensable reference guide for practising teachers and student teachers, especially those undertaking postgraduate qualifications, as well as early literacy researchers, policy makers and school-based literacy leaders.

Contemporary Perspectives on Literacy in Early Childhood Education Olivia Saracho, Bernard Spodek, 2002-04-01. This volume identifies and critically analyzes research studies related to the critical skills, environments and adult interactions that contribute to young children's literacy development. The volume reminisces on the reformation that has emerged in the language and literacy education of young children. Prior to the 1960s, few studies were available on pre-first-grade literacy. Then studies began to emerge in the 1960s, focusing on the reading readiness paradigm and on the conventional assumption that literacy development was only introduced when children experienced formal reading instruction in school. Sulzby and Teale (1986) Fortunately, Durkin (1966) found that there were children reading before first grade and determined that the reading readiness paradigm was theoretically and pragmatically incongruous. Others followed Durkin's footsteps. Sulzby and Teale (1986) identify the following concepts about young children's acquisition of literacy learning:

1. Literacy development originates well before children are introduced to formal instruction.
2. The notion that reading precedes writing or that writing precedes reading is a fallacy.
3. Literacy blooms in real-life settings and by performing real-life activities that are used to get things done.
4. The purposes of literacy for young children are as important in learning about writing and reading as are the dimensions of literacy.
5. Children's cognitive development is important to their acquisition of literacy during the years from birth to six.
6. Children learn written language when they actively engage in their world Competent teachers throughout the United States suggest that prior to attending school children have acquired a distinctive culture collection of experiences and group of abilities Vacca Vacca 2000 Many prekindergarten children have been in a group setting for three and four years such as a child care setting where teachers and caregivers teach them reading and writing Readings from childhood education Margaret Rasmussen,1966
