Technological Change and the United States Navy, 1865-1945 William M. McBride, 2003-04-01 Winner Engineer Historian Award from the American Society of Mechanical Engineers Navies have always been technologically sophisticated from the ancient world's trireme galleys and the Age of Sail's ships of the line to the dreadnoughts of World War I and today's nuclear powered aircraft carriers and submarines Yet each large technical innovation has met with resistance and even hostility from those officers who adhering to a familiar warrior ethos have grown used to a certain style of fighting In Technological Change and the United States Navy William M McBride examines how the navy dealt with technological change from the end of the Civil War through the age of the battleship as technology became more complex and the nation assumed a global role Although steam engines generally made their mark in the maritime world by 1865 for example and proved useful to the Union riverine navy during the Civil War a backlash within the service later developed against both steam engines and the engineers who ran them Early in the twentieth century the large dreadnought battleship at first met similar resistance from some officers including the famous Alfred Thayer Mahan and their industrial and political allies During the first half of the twentieth century the battleship exercised a dominant influence on those who developed the nation's strategies and operational plans at the same time that advances in submarines and fixed wing aircraft complicated the picture and undermined the battleship's superiority In any given period argues McBride some technologies initially threaten the navy's image of itself Professional jealousies and insecurities ignorance and hidebound traditions arguably influenced the officer corps on matters of technology as much as concerns about national security and McBride contends that this dynamic persists today McBride also demonstrates the interplay between technological innovation and other influences on naval adaptability international commitments strategic concepts government industrial relations and the constant influence of domestic politics Challenging technological determinism he uncovers the conflicting attitudes toward technology that guided naval policy between the end of the Civil War and the dawning of the nuclear age The evolution and persistence of the battleship navy he argues offer direct insight into the dominance of the aircraft carrier paradigm after 1945 and into the twenty first century The American Naval Heritage in Brief Paolo Enrico Coletta, 1978 Testing American Sea

Power Craig C. Felker, 2013-03-28 The Pacific Theater in World War II depended on American sea power This power was refined between 1923 and 1940 when the U S Navy held twenty one major fleet exercises designed to develop strategy and allow officers to enact plans in an operational setting Prior to 1923 naval officers relied heavily on the theories of Capt Alfred Thayer Mahan who argued that sea control was vital to military victory best attained through use of the battleship Fleet exercises however allowed valuable practice with other military resources and theories As a direct result of these exercises the navy incorporated different technologies and updated its own outdated strategies Although World War II brought unforeseen challenges and the disadvantages of simulation exercises quickly became apparent fleet problems may have opened the door to different ideas that allowed the U S Navy ultimately to succeed Testing American Sea Power challenges the conventional wisdom that Mahanian theory held the American Navy in a steel grip Felker s research and analysis the first to concentrate on the navy s interwar exercises will make a valuable contribution to naval history for historians military professionals and naval instructors A Concise History of the United States Marine Corps, 1775-1969 United States Marine Corps, 1970 A Concise History of the United States Marine Corps, 1775-1969 William D. Memory, Heritage, and Preservation in 20th-Century England David Strittmatter, 2023-03-09 This book explores commemoration practices and preservation efforts in modern Britain focusing on the years from the end of the First World War until the mid 1960s The changes wrought by war led Britain to reconsider major historical episodes that made up its national narrative Part of this process was a reassessment of heritage sites because such places carry socio political meaning as do the memorials that mark them This book engages the four way intersection of commemoration preservation tourism and urban planning at some of the most notable historic locations in England The various actors in this process from the national government and regional councils to private organizations and interested individuals did nothing less than engineer British national memory The author presents case studies of six famous British places namely battlefields Hastings and Bosworth political sites Runnymede and Peterloo and world s fairgrounds the Crystal Palace and Great White City In all three genres of heritage sites one location developed through commemorations and tourism while the other anti sites simultaneously faltered as they were neither memorialized nor visited by the masses Ultimately the book concludes that the modern social and political environment resulted in the revival creation or erasure of heritage sites in the service of promoting British national identity A valuable read for British historians as well as scholars of memory public history and cultural studies the book argues that heritage emerged as a discursive arena in which British identity was renegotiated through times of transitions both into a democratic age and an era of geopolitical decline The New Larned History for
