Spectroscopic Analysis of Coal Liquids John R. Kershaw, 1989 This book comprehensively and critically reviews the analysis of coal derived liquids by modern spectroscopic techniques All the major techniques used in the analysis of coal liquids are included with detailed chapters on mass infrared ultraviolet and luminescence nuclear magnetic resonance and electron spin resonance spectroscopy Each method is critically evaluated and the limitations and problems that the complexity of typical coal liquids impose on each technique are discussed The book also includes a discussion of solvent fractionation chromatographic separations and the pyrolysis and hydropyrolysis of coal liquids A detailed review of the composition of coal liquids from various coal liquefaction processes and a brief introduction to coal science are also included This is the only comprehensive coverage of the spectroscopic analysis of coal liquids It also contains a wealth of information on the composition and properties of coal liquids produced from various coal types under a variety of processing conditions These two features alone should make it essential reading for all professionals involved in liquid fuels research Mass Spectrometric Characterization of Shale Oils Thomas Aczel, 1986 Scientific and Technical Books and Serials in Print, 1989 Mass Spectrometric Characterization of Shale Oils American Society for Testing and Materials Staff, Subject Guide to Books in Print, 1975 Books in Print, 1991 Books in Series, 1876-1949 R.R. Greenwood, 1986 Detailed characterization of shale oils can provide invaluable information for refining into a saleable product To provide this type of information an acidic and a basic fraction were obtained from an eastern and western shale oil The fractions were analyzed using 70 eV high resolution electron impact and low resolution field ionization mass spectrometry Comparison of the analytical data shows striking differences between the compositions of acids and bases for the eastern and western shale oils The eastern shale acids are primarily benzoic acids and phenols whereas the western shale acids contain high concentrations of benzoic and long chain carboxylic acids Differences in the base fractions appear in the number of carbons exocyclic to the basic nucleus and in the size of the nitrogen containing nucleus with as many as six aromatic rings In contrast the western bases have a larger number of carbons exocyclic to a specific nucleus with the nucleus having fewer aromatic rings The presence of these compound types has serious refining implications since their presence could complicate a simple hydrogenation hydrogenolysis upgrading using present refinery technology Gas Chromatographic/Mass Spectrometric Analysis of Paraho Shale Oil EJ.
