Hanson, 2012-12-06 The years following World War II have witnessed an increasing interest in the effects of growth on trade the patterns of international specialization and the terms of trade On the one hand some English economists have maintained the Ricardian tradition of diminishing returns rising food prices and therefore declining British terms of trade while on the other hand Prebisch Singer and other critics have attempted to document and explain a long run decline in the terms of trade of the underdeveloped countries Finally in a reaction to this concentration on a single factor as the determinant of international price movements a group of economists began a systematic investigation of the role of growth in trade and the terms of trade using neoclassical assumption This study particularly in its assumptions regarding demand falls into the tradition of the last group However it extends the tradition by treating growth as a continuous process dependent on saving out of produced income and the growth rate of population in two trading economies. Therefore, in addition to answering the comparative statics questions regarding the trends in the terms of trade, it develops the conditions which guarantee that the two economies will approach a state of unique long-run balanced growth in which all per capita variables as well as the terms of trade stabilize. Moreover, these methods permit some discussion of changes in the patterns of specialization.

Power, Powerlessness, and Globalization Opoku Agyeman, 2014-08-20. This book is about imperialism-driven globalization, its historic impact on Africa, Latin America, and Asia, and over time the varied responses of the national political units and regional entities in these continents to the challenges of building countervailing power and laying foundations for independent development. Where genuine recovery and empowerment have emerged, this has been the result not only of the pursuit of dignified political and economic values that emphasize robust and sustained productivity geared toward uplifting the living standards and dignity of all the members of the national society but also of the creation of indigenous institutions whose relations with the external world are defined by equality rather than dependence and subordination. Opoku Agyeman argues that dignification is the fundamentally necessary response to imperialism's inevitable afflictions of national racial humiliation. It is the most crucial ingredient in the complex of motivations that propel formerly weak nation-states and regional communities to rise up and defend the honor of their people. As Mao Zedong told the world in 1949, "Ours will no longer be a nation subject to insult and humiliation. We have stood up." This study argues emphatically that it is a country's or region's developed or developing capabilities, not its historic and continuing victimization or habitual dependence on charitable aid and other altruistic interventions from the international community that determines its success in escaping the scourge of powerlessness and underdevelopment. It further maintains that a people who have been brought low through brutal dehumanizing imperialism cannot bypass the need for redemptive empowerment if they wish to regain honor and a proper place in the world. Finally, it takes issue with Joseph Stiglitz, Jeffrey Sachs, and others like them whose moralistic critiques of the rapacity of imperialistic globalization carry the unfortunate implication that it is possible for a fair and just world social order to come out of incremental reforms of philanthropically motivated developed powerful countries in the structure and operations of global capitalism.

APEC at 20 K. Kesavapany, Hank Lim, 2009. Spanning 20 years of history, the achievements of APEC may seem uneventful in the eyes of some observers. Yet careful deliberation will point to APEC's many remarkable high points as well as some of the challenges. The foundations of APEC were set in place about 40 years ago based on the achievements of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and the Pacific Economic Cooperation Council (PECC). One of the cornerstones of APEC's vision is to achieve a free and open trade area among its member economies. This vision is anchored in the Bogor Goals that remain the centrepiece of the APEC process. The Bogor Goals represent a cause for celebration as well as angst. Celebration because the region has moved towards achieving a much more liberalized environment of trading and investment.

since 1989 angst because the deadlines for achieving the goals have not yet been fully realized Today APEC embraces many of the world's dynamic developed and developing economies that are better poised to meet the new challenges of this century For those seeking to get a quick sweep of APEC this book recalls reflects and provides enough food for thought on the possible remake of APEC The chapters are carefully written by experts who have been directly involved in the APEC process one way or another The invaluable insights serve to place the whole APEC process in a balanced perspective yet with candid deliberations Asia-Pacific Economies Iyanatul Islam, Anis Chowdhury, 1997 Why is the centre of international economic dynamism moving towards the countries of the East and South East Asia Are there common elements that explain this success Divided into two parts the authors consider the central debates concerning the developm
