Universal Transverse Mercator Grid United States. Department of the Army,1958 U.S. National Grid Standard PNT Position, Navigation, and Timing,2018 This standard SAE1002 is a republication of FGDC STD 011 2001 and defines a preferred USNG for mapping applications at scales of approximately 1 1000000 and larger It defines how to present Universal Transverse Mercator UTM coordinates at various levels of precision It specifies the use of those coordinates with the grid system defined by the Military Grid Reference System MGRS Additionally it addresses specific presentation issues such as grid spacing Together the UTM coordinate representation the MGRS grid and the specific grid presentation requirements define the USNG Use of USNG grid coordinates may be useful and even desirable within some systems or enterprises The decision to use USNG grid coordinates or some other coordinate system internal to geographic information systems or location service appliances is left to the discretion of the system developer as long as the human interface provides for USNG grid coordinate readout as one option The U S National Grid USNG is the civilian version of the Military Grid Reference System MGRS the Department of Defense uses for tactical operations The USNG enables geocoding incident locations from 100 m to 1 m precision Federal Emergency Management Agency FEMA Urban Search and Rescue USAR teams have been using USNG for years but many other first responder organizations and agencies are slow in adopting it Examples include E911 Firstnet the Coast Guard and state local emergency response jurisdictions In October 2017 FEMA issued its third edition of the National Incident Management System which states The U S National Grid is simple to apply to support risk assessment planning response and recovery operations Individuals public agencies voluntary organizations and commercial enterprises may use the National Grid within and across diverse geographic areas and disciplines The use of the National Grid promotes consistent situational awareness across all levels of government disciplines threats and hazards regardless of an individual or program s role Adoption of the USNG as an SAE International standard by its Position Navigation and Timing PNT Committee will enhance the Committee s ongoing work in Critical Infrastructure support efforts relative to mobilization and coordination of resources for all types of emergency response operations
