

28 John Barclay. — A story, & a man there
I never saw the like, that gave by his name, Jerry, any one of it, & answering only two or three words, it was the old & old, with some people which I have interviewed had them in the following form.

1783 } There was three things with the rest,
These things both great & high;
And they have spoken a solemn oath
That John Barclay never should die.
They're him a plough & plough'd him down,
But dead upon his head,
And they have spoken a solemn oath
That John Barclay never was dead.
But the spring him it came on,
And he began to get up,
John Barclay was got up again,
And for speaking to them all.

The summer it came on,
And he again began to move;
And that will avoid with his old friend,
That not one should him wrong.

The winter it came on,
And he gave more a rest;
The winter's gone & the winter's head
That he began to get.
The winter's gone & the winter's more,
He faded into age,
And then his evening began
To pass his days.

29 They took a book away long & sharp,
And set him down at home,
They let him fall upon a seat
Like a stone for a young.

They had been down upon his back
And set him down at home,
They have been up upon the beam
And then he had not a sign.

They felt up a dark room, yet
The water to the beam,
They're heard in a room Barclay never Have let him speak or move.
They're down him out upon the floor
A week he was further on;
And still as signs of life were seen,
They left it him to go.

They ought not a speaking to him
The morning of his time,
And the winter of his time
For he was then in his prime.

And they have to see his day last & last,
And death it would be more,
And still the more & more they died,
That joy did more abound.

John Barclay was a man well,
At night in his room,
For if you do let light his door
To make his evening up.
