Lesson 1 - What is crime and punishment?

Crime and Punishment

Throughout time, people have always committed crimes. These crimes may have been minor crimes, such as theft, or more serious crimes, such as murder. The way our country deals with criminals has changed throughout time. We will look at different periods and the crimes and punishments that occurred. Before doing this, we will look at the chronology of time we are studying and order the periods of time we are studying in an to find out more about crime and punishment at the time.

In Robert Peel set up the first police force in Britain during the Victorian Period. The government changed the law to stop public hangings in 1868, and the prison system became organised and professional.

In the 21st millennium, there are new crimes such as car theft, online banking and anti social behaviour. People are still sent to prison and some offenders are electronically tagged. A record number of people are in prisons now for many different forms of theft.

Challenge

1. Write down three crimes that you think are serious.

2. Write down what you think the punishment should be.
