The Making of Community Work David N. Thomas, 2024-11-01 Originally published in 1983 The Making of Community Work is the outcome of a two year study of community work in the United Kingdom The main purpose of the study was to review the development of community work and to suggest some of the issues in practice and training that might be important in the 1980s Much of the first part of the book is taken up with the emergence of community work as an occupation David Thomas tries to clarify its contribution to a number of political and social processes and to define community work in a way which distinguishes it from other kinds of interventions The second part of the book deals with training research literature and employment in community work it includes a review of college and field based training opportunities and a critical discussion of the state of theory and ideology in the occupation It was hoped it would be an important source of ideas and inspiration for the years ahead It was the first major review of community work since its re discovery in the 1960s it will still be of interest to all those involved in community work or wishing to understand its influence on other professions The book was intended for fieldworkers administrators policy makers trainers and students in community work and in related occupations and disciplines Thomas presents his ideas clearly and his ability to look critically at some of the basic assumptions in community work makes for stimulating and enjoyable reading The Making of

Confronting Hunger in the USA Adam M. Pine,2016-07-01 Food insecurity in the US is a critical issue that is experienced by approximately 15% of the population each year Hunger is not caused by an inability to produce enough food for the population but is instead a manifestation of federal agricultural policies that support the overproduction of commodity crops and neoliberal social policies that seek to lower the amount of benefits dispersed to those in need This book focuses on how four different food based community programs address both the physical sensation of hunger as well as the political and economic disempowerment that work against the ability of people experiencing food insecurity to mobilize as a political force Confronting Hunger in the USA argues that most food programs do more to create community among their volunteers than among program participants and tend to reinforce neoliberal understandings of citizenship Community food programs reach out to the most vulnerable members of society in caring and gentle ways and often use the language of alternative economies to articulate a different relationship between the individual and the state However the projects in this study act as individual pieces of the state s insufficient social safety net and are only beginning to articulate a new relationship between food and society
