Making Art Pay:

Making Foreign People Pay Ali Cem Budak, 2019-05-29 First published in 1999 Making Foreign People Pay deals with the recovery of monetary claims in cross border legal relations and contains the results of a comparative empirical research of debt recovery procedures of three countries with different socio legal environments Germany England and Turkey In order to analyse judicial debt recovery of cross border claims court statistics and files have been evaluated The data show an infrequent use of the courts in all three countries It seems that legal efforts aiming at facilitating international procedures have not been successful But court procedures for the recovery of monetary claims are now to a large extent interchangeable with what may be called privatised methods of debt collection including modern financial services such as factoring forfaiting and commercial debt collection Empirical evidence shows that such privatization of debt collection is a strong trend in cross border debt collection The book is an empirical contribution to the ongoing discussion of globalization processes and describes an important field of the globalization of law

How Artists Make Money and How Money Makes Artists David Berry, 2025-10-14 How artists make a living and how money changes art It may not be the worst time in history to get paid to make art but it certainly is the strangest The institutions and markets that have been supporting the arts are undergoing massive changes some even disappearing Meanwhile the tools to make art and find audiences have never been more accessible and there are more people than ever making art How Artists Make Money and How Money Makes Artists is an attempt to reckon with the history of money in the arts from Titian to Taylor Swift and how that complicated relationship is changing David Berry analyzes past and present financial dynamics in the arts to show the practicalities of how artists make a living and how that in turn affects the reception and perception of artists and their work the impacts art has on wider society how economic realities affect aesthetic judgements of art what kind of people are able to work as artists and how political and cultural ideas about the nature of art affect what kind of resources are made available to it David Berry explores how art has become central to our understanding of humanity by tying art to what makes the world go round money Along the way he challenges popular ideas of what constitutes a successful artistic career and considers what our treatment of artists says about us The Death of the Artist William Deresiewicz, 2020-07-28 A deeply researched warning about how the digital economy threatens artists lives and work the music writing and visual art that sustain our souls and societies from an award winning essayist and critic There are two stories you hear about earning a living as an artist in the digital age One comes from Silicon Valley There s never been a better time to be an artist it goes If you ve got a laptop you ve got a recording studio If you ve got an iPhone you ve got a movie camera And if production is cheap distribution is free it s called the Internet Everyone s an artist just tap your creativity and put your stuff out there The other comes from artists themselves Sure it goes you can put your stuff out there but who s going to pay you for it Everyone is not an artist Making art takes years of dedication and that requires a means of support If things don t change a lot of art will cease to be sustainable So which account is true Since people are still making a living as artists today how are they managing to do it William Deresiewicz a leading critic of the arts and of contemporary culture set out to answer those questions Based on interviews with artists of all kinds The Death of the Artist argues that we are in the midst of an epochal transformation If artists were artisans in the Renaissance bohemians in the nineteenth century and professionals in the twentieth a new paradigm is emerging in the digital age one that is changing our fundamental ideas about the nature of art and the role of the artist in society
