NASA's Scientist-Astronauts Shayler David, Colin Burgess, 2007-09-19 Mounting pressure in the early 1960s from the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) to study ways of expanding the role of astronauts to conduct science on future space missions led to NASA's conclusion that flying scientifically trained crewmembers would generate greater returns from each mission. NASA and industry studies continued investigating possibilities that could lead to the eventual creation of the first space stations using surplus Apollo hardware through the Apollo Applications Programme (AAP). There was also a growing interest within the military to create their own manned space station programme conducting on-orbit experiments and research with strategic advantages for national security. In October 1964 the Soviets launched Voskhod 1, whose 3-man crew were identified as the first scientific passengers in space A few days later NASA and the NAS had completed joint studies into the possibility of using scientists in the manned space programme and invited scientists to apply for astronaut training In selecting the first group of scientist astronauts NASA had one firm requirement any person accepted into the programme would have to qualify as a military jet pilot While the second group of scientists were completing their academic survival and flight training programme the remaining members of the first scientist astronaut group were involved in supporting the developing Apollo Applications programme and the Apollo lunar programme

Falling to Earth Al Worden,Francis French,2011-07-26 As command module pilot for the Apollo 15 mission to the moon in 1971 Al

Worden flew on what is widely regarded as the greatest exploration mission that humans have ever attempted. He spent six days orbiting the moon including three days completely alone, the most isolated human in existence. During the return from the moon to earth, he also conducted the first spacewalk in deep space, becoming the first human ever to see both the entire earth and moon simply by turning his head. The Apollo 15 flight capped an already impressive career as an astronaut including important work on the pioneering Apollo 9 and Apollo 12 missions as well as the perilous flight of Apollo 13. Nine months after his return from the moon, Worden received a phone call telling him he was fired and ordering him out of his office by the end of the week. He refused to leave. What happened in those nine months, from being honored with parades and meetings with world leaders to being unceremoniously fired, has been a source of much speculation for four decades. Worden has never before told the full story around the dramatic events that shook NASA and ended his spaceflight career. Readers will learn them here for the first time along with the exhilarating account of what it is like to journey to the moon and back. It is an unprecedentedly candid account of what it was like to be an Apollo astronaut with all its glory but also its pitfalls.

From Cave Man to Cave Martian Manfred "Dutch" von Ehrenfried, 2019-04-05 This book explores the practicality of using the existing subsurface geology on the Moon and Mars for protection against radiation, thermal extremes, micrometeorites, and dust storms rather than building surface habitats at great expense at least for those first few missions. It encourages NASA to plan a precursor mission using this concept and employ a Short Stay Opposition Class mission to Mars as the first mission rather than the Long Stay concept requiring a mission that is too long, too dangerous, and too costly for man's first missions to Mars. Included in these pages is a short history on the uses of caves by early humans over great periods of time. It then describes the ongoing efforts to research caves, pits, tunnels, lava tubes, skylights, and the associated technologies that pertain to potential lunar and Mars exploration and habitation. It describes evidence for existing caves and lava tubes on both the Moon and Mars. The work of noted scientists, technologists, and roboticists are referenced and described. This ongoing work is more extensive than one would think and is directly applicable to longer term habitation and exploration of the Moon and Mars. Emphasis is also given to the operational aspects of working and living in lunar and Martian caves and lava tubes.
