Reducing The Risks Of Nonstructural Earthquake Damage A Practical Guide:

Reducing the Risks of Nonstructural Earthquake Damage Federal Emergency Management Agency, 2013-04-24

This guide was developed to fulfill several different objectives and address a wide audience with varying needs. The primary intent is to explain the sources of nonstructural earthquake damage in simple terms and to provide information on effective methods of reducing the potential risks. The recommendations contained in this guide are intended to reduce the potential hazards but cannot completely eliminate them. The primary focus of this guide is to help the reader understand which nonstructural items are most vulnerable in an earthquake and most likely to cause personal injury, costly property damage, or loss of function if they are damaged. In addition, this guide contains recommendations on how to implement cost-effective measures that can help to reduce the potential hazards. This guide is intended primarily for use by a lay audience: building owners, facilities managers, maintenance personnel, store or office managers, corporate agency department heads, business proprietors, homeowners, etc. Some readers may be small business owners with a small number of potential problems that could be addressed in a few days' time by having a handyman install some of the generic details presented in this guide. Other readers may be responsible for hundreds of facilities and may need a survey methodology to help them understand the magnitude of their potential problems.

Reducing the Risks of Nonstructural Earthquake Damage U. S. Department of Homeland Security, Federal Emergency Management Agency, 2013-04-02. Nonstructural failures have accounted for the majority of earthquake damage in several recent U.S. earthquakes. Thus, it is critical to raise awareness of potential nonstructural risks, the costly consequences of nonstructural failures, and the opportunities that exist to limit future losses. Nonstructural components of a building include all of those components that are not part of the structural system—that is, all of the architectural, mechanical, electrical, and plumbing systems, as well as furniture, fixtures, equipment, and contents. Windows, partitions, granite veneer, piping, ceilings, air conditioning ducts, and equipment, elevators, computer and hospital equipment, file cabinets, and retail merchandise are all examples of nonstructural components that are vulnerable to earthquake damage. The primary purpose of this guide is to explain the sources of nonstructural earthquake damage and to describe methods for reducing the potential risks in simple terms. This guide is intended for use by a non-engineer audience located within the United States; this audience includes building owners, facility managers, maintenance personnel, store or office managers, corporate or agency department heads, business proprietors risk managers and safety personnel The guide is also designed to be useful for design professionals especially those who are not experienced with seismic protection of nonstructural components It addresses nonstructural issues typically found in schools office buildings retail stores hotels data centers hospitals museums and light manufacturing facilities FEMA 74 explains the sources of earthquake damage that can occur in nonstructural components and provides information on effective methods for reducing risk associated with nonstructural earthquake damage It is intended for use by a non engineer audience that includes building owners facility managers maintenance personnel store or office managers corporate or agency department heads and homeowners The reference material contained within the third edition of FEMA 74 is now approaching 20 years old A considerable amount of new information now exists as a result of ongoing National Earthquake Hazard Reduction Program NEHRP activities local and state government programs private sector initiatives and academic work focused on reducing the potential for nonstructural earthquake damage
