and puritans themselves were often fond of hunting and hawking Bernard Capp explores the propaganda wars waged in press and pulpit how energetically reformation was pursued and how much or little was achieved Many recent historians have dismissed interregnum reformation as a failure He demonstrates that while the reforming drive varied enormously from place to place its impact could be powerful The book is therefore structured in three parts setting out the reform agenda and challenges surveying general issues and patterns and finally offering a number of representative case studies It draws on a wide range of sources including local and central government records judicial records pamphlets sermons newspapers diaries letters and memoirs and demonstrates how court records by themselves give us only a very limited picture of what was happening on the ground

Before the modern growth of centralised government the most important unit of administration was the county Counties were run by Justices of the Peace sitting together at Quarter Sessions where as well as trying criminal cases they dealt with all county business In the years between 1650 and 1830 a increasing proportion of their time and resources was taken up in erecting public buildings Building by counties taken together represents a substantial and previously little noticed programme of public works Unlike most other building works in this period where the details of planning building execution and cost are lost county building is well documented allowing us to follow clearly the stages of erection The county building programme reflected changes in society and in the economy apart from being itself an indication of the growing wealth of the period A sizeable part of county budgets was spent on bridges A series of increasingly elaborate bridewells and gaols reflected concerns over employment and crime also reflected in the erection of judges lodgings and court houses the latter being often incorporated in shire halls Rising humanitarian alarm about mental illness led to the building of pauper lunatic asylums after 1800 English Counties and Public Building 1650 1830 is an original and important contribution to both administrative and architectural history Before the modern growth of centralised government the most important unit of administration was the county Counties were run by Justices of the Peace sitting together at Quarter Sessions where as well as trying criminal cases they dealt with all county business In the years between 1650 and 1830 a increasing proportion of their time and resources was taken up in erecting public buildings Building by counties taken together represents a substantial and previously little noticed programme of public works Unlike most other building works in this period where the details of planning building execution and cost are lost county building is well documented allowing us to follow clearly the stages of erection The county building programme reflected changes in society and in the economy apart from being itself an indication of the growing wealth of the period A sizeable part of county budgets was spent on bridges A series of increasingly elaborate bridewells and gaols reflected concerns over employment and crime also reflected in the erection of judges lodgings and court houses the latter being often incorporated in shire halls Rising humanitarian alarm about mental illness led to the building of pauper lunatic asylums after 1800 English Counties and Public Building 1650 1830 is an original
