Cultural Narration

Bryant Griffith, 2008-01-01 Education is a dance of complexity and struggle Unfortunately our educational system is tied to the observable and the verifiable not the randomness of human beings and their diverse forms of expression The reality of the contemporary classroom is a context of multifaceted diversity with each classroom reflecting unique combinations of ideology culture and language played out in numerous forms and permutations of multi textual discourses The influence of each contextual space is only limited by one's ability to understand its complexity and to acknowledge it Teachers and learners are roommates of sorts connected by the web of discourse and praxis woven inside the global community We live in a world where common understanding is desperately sought yet one where language is often not tied to common understanding Exploring the need for shared community within this context Griffith provides a path in which the diverse ways of knowing can interlace to form pedagogical moments in which teachers and learners can deconstruct and construct alternatives Cultural narration is based on a series of social relationships which can be compared to reading the world as a series of texts As readers become a part of the reconstruction process the educational system can be visualized as a series of cautionary tales about possibilities about ways to live and build community in this modern postmodern world The author focuses on the nature of discourse and the importance of engaging in dialogue about what it means to be other conscious what it means to address questions about who we are and how we came to be who we are This path is continuously under construction it is always in the process of becoming what is appearing on the horizon As teachers learn to commit themselves to the gaps revealed by the narratives of their students classrooms become discourse communities and contact zones co constructing contextual discourses which acknowledge ritual and gesture manifested in various forms of text

Experiencing Environment and Place through Children's Literature Amy Cutter-Mackenzie, Phillip Payne, Alan Reid, 2014-06-11 Recent scholarship on children's literature displays a wide variety of interests in classic and contemporary children's books. While environmental and ecological concerns have led to an interest in ecocriticism, as yet there is little on the significance of the ecological imagination and experience to both the authors and readers young and old of these texts. This edited collection brings together a set of original international research-based chapters to explore the role of children's literature in learning about environments and places with a focus on how children's literature may inform and enrich our imagination, experiences, and responses to environmental challenges and injustice. Contributions from Australia, Canada, USA, and UK explore the diverse ways in which children's literature can provide what are arguably some of the first and possibly most formative engagements that some children might have with nature. Chapters examine classic and new storybooks, mythic tales, and image-based and/or written texts read at home, in school, and in the field. Contributors focus on exploring how children's literature mediates and informs our imagination and understandings of diverse environments and places and how it might open our eyes and lives to other presences, understandings, and priorities through stories, their telling, and re-telling, and their analysis. This book was originally published as a special issue of Environmental Education Research.

Exploding the Reading David Booth, 2014-11-05. One 200-year-old folk tale, 30 teachers, and 1,000 students ride along with literacy guru David Booth as he takes the same story to a wide variety of classrooms from kindergarten all the way through grade 12 and be amazed by the learning generated. David argues that it takes two to read a book. He reasons that sharing responses and bouncing ideas off others guides students to deeper thinking and challenges them to reconsider their views and increase their understanding. This intriguing book also shows teachers how to help students discover the world outside the text, the origins, connections, place values, and the different perceptions that readers have. It illustrates ways to transpose that original text into other forms that let students look at the text with different eyes to ponder what might have been to challenge what they read and to add their new learning to the construct of the world. Throughout the book, authentic student samples and actual transcripts present students experiencing the featured story in a multitude of ways from poems and retellings to visuals and arts to conversation and blogs that will explode your definitions of comprehension, response, and engagement and have you looking at classroom literacy in a whole new way.

Reframing Common Discourse Bryant Griffith, 2010-01-01 We live immersed in what appears to be a paradox between coherence and complexity It is the gap between the modern presuppositions we largely live by and the emerging presuppositions we are testing which makes this seem chaotic It is the pull of the individual and the collective and their multi layered discourses Your role as a teacher as the one who crafts the magic of knowing is to be the auteur the author the director the conductor who understands where the students are situated and inspires them to levels of understanding where they become the experts You need to be the listener and the one to guide constructively the path which knits emerging personal meaning with understanding and shared knowledge The outcome will be a text which you have never read a piece of music you have never heard and a portrait you have never seen This is the collective voice of common discourse and it is limitless The groundwork for a common discourse I suggest lies in as if making meaning of a series of multiple possibilities Each of us has been brought up in a society with a set of relative presuppositions about the way things work and what things mean We can acknowledge different voices by thinking of them as a series of small cautionary tales related to us and by us about the way things might be Teaching Literature-Based Instructional Units Angela L.
