The New Economy in East Asia and the Pacific Peter Drysdale, 2004-08-02 This book sets out the problems of measuring the effects of technological change on economic progress by using the internet in the Asia Pacific region as a case study Corporate and industry experience including changing business organization and new regulatory issues are explored as well as policy issues such as the digital divide and the approach to e commerce in the WTO Using several industry case studies the contributors compare the IT experience in North America with a number of countries in Asia and the Pacific

The Politics and the Economics of Integration in Asia and the Pacific Shiro Armstrong, 2011-11-03 The shape of economic integration in the global and regional economies and the extent to which goods services and factors of production move more or less freely across borders depends not only upon underlying economic conditions but also upon politics Whether integration is market led as has been the case in Asia or institution led as in Europe there are political elements that affect all forms of regional and international economic integration While geopolitics influences international economic integration so too does domestic politics Economic integration in Asia has been driven by rapid unilateral trade and investment liberalization and while trade and investment patterns have been determined largely by comparative advantage political forces have also affected patterns of economic interdependence The form that regional institutions take and their effectiveness also depends on political relations between countries The particular circumstances in Asia and the relationships between regional economies has profoundly shaped regional institutions and will continue to do so The chapters in this volume draw on papers originally presented to the 33rd Pacific Trade and Development Conference held in Taipei in 2009 to look in original ways at how politics shape economic integration and its various dimensions in Asia and the Pacific and globally

Human Capital Formation and Economic Growth in Asia and the Pacific Wendy Dobson, 2013-07-18 The entire planet looks to Asian and other emerging markets to sustain growth momentum as traditional markets in the USA and Europe struggle with the slow and arduous processes of deleveraging after the global financial crisis At the same time there is growing recognition in Asia that the sources of growth must shift to sustain their own growth momentum in the years ahead Heavy reliance on the region's high savings rates and plentiful supplies of low cost labour will have to shift towards increasing the human capital embodied in more educated and skilled labour forces capable of contributing to productivity growth and innovation as future drivers of growth Human Capital Formation and Economic Growth in Asia and the Pacific focuses on why and how countries are making this shift The demographic transition is shown to be a significant factor as ageing populations in Japan South Korea and China manage declining growth in the labour force by stepping up investments in education and by changing policies and institutions Lessons to be learned from these experiences by more youthful populations in Southeast Asia are explored In addition attention is paid to the consequences of cross border differentials in technical knowledge and the quantity and quality of human capital Several implications for public policy and for international cooperation on human capital issues in the Asian region are identified The chapters in this volume are edited versions of papers presented at the 35th Pacific Trade and Development conference held in Vancouver Canada in June 2012 The conference goal was to better understand how governments and business in Asia and the Pacific can apply the key insight that one of the reasons economies grow is because of human capital formation the quality and diversity of the labour force are augmented not just because the labour force grows in size Students of Asia s growth prospects will find several aspects of this volume of particular value It includes chapters on the big picture conceptual and measurement issues on country experiences in meeting the imperatives of the demographic transition and investing in education and skills training and on country experiences with attracting foreign knowledge and the supply and recruitment of skills across borders in Asia and the Pacific Policymakers will also find useful the discussions of policy implications and the menu of issues requiring intergovernmental cooperation within the Asian region

Various aspects of SME operations are studied, including the role and significance of networking in the conduct of business, the contribution of culture to business acumen and entrepreneurialism, human resource development, constraints and issues, technology transfer processes, the utilisation and application of information technology by SMEs, the impact of electronic commerce, the policy framework needed to stimulate the growth of the SME sector. World Bank

East Asia and Pacific Economic Update, October 2019 World Bank, 2019-10-09. Growth in the developing East Asia and Pacific region slowed in the first half of 2019, given weakening global demand and heightened policy uncertainty amid ongoing trade tensions. Steady consumption growth helped to partly offset the effects of weakening exports and investment on growth. The region's growth prospects face intensified downside risks, including further escalation of trade disputes, a sharper than expected slowdown in China, the United States, and the Euro Area, along with a disorderly Brexit and an abrupt change in global financing conditions. In some countries, rising indebtedness and other vulnerabilities, such as the constrained capacity for foreign debt rollover, could amplify the negative effects of external shocks. The regional growth moderation underscores the need to address key vulnerabilities and preserve economic dynamism among developing East Asia and Pacific economies. In the short run, countries with sufficient policy space should use available policy tools to stimulate domestic activities. Better quality spending, together with prudent debt management, is needed to safeguard fiscal sustainability. Deepening regional integration would help offset the negative impact of global protectionism. In the medium to long term, pursuing structural reforms that raise competitiveness, support trade and investment, and encourage innovation is critical to boosting productivity and growth. World Bank East Asia and Pacific Economic Update April 2016 World Bank, 2016-04-11. In the past 6 months, developing East Asia and Pacific has faced a challenging external environment, but growth has generally remained resilient. Over the next 3 years, growth is expected to ease modestly. China will continue its gradual shift to a more sustainable growth path. Some economies will be affected by low commodity prices and weaker external demand. This outlook is subject to elevated risks. Countries should prioritize monetary and fiscal policies that reduce their exposure to risks and strengthen market confidence. In China, there is a need to reduce leverage. In several countries, action is required to enhance transparency, strengthen accountability, and redefine the role of the state. Efforts to reduce barriers to trade should be redoubled, with a particular focus on non-tariff measures and regulatory barriers, including to trade in services The region must increase its readiness to benefit from the digital revolution and in particular develop the essential analog complements to digital technologies

Multinational Corporations and the Emerging Network Economy in Asia and the Pacific Juan J. Palacios, 2008-03-25 Multinational Corporations and the Emerging Network Economy in Asia and the Pacific delves into the ongoing rise of a global economy anchored in a web of inter firm production networks and the role played by multinational corporations in the process It considers the strategies and business models corporations have adopted lately to face today's highly competitive global markets especially outsourcing and offshoring focusing on the modalities observed in Asia Pacific and the Pacific Rim at large Since their inception corporations have undergone a series of fundamental changes each has corresponded to a given era of industrial development and has given rise to a particular type of government policy response The book addresses these timely issues and other such as the transformation of global production networks into global innovation networks the link between corporate and national innovation strategies and movement up the global production value chain and the fragmentation of production and the resulting increase in component and sub assembly trade in the region It also takes up the emergence of multinational corporations from developing countries and the efforts aimed at forging basic rules of corporate social responsibility and developing sound institutions for building a working framework of corporate governance in the Pacific Written by some of the region's most eminent and influential economists and political scientists this volume will appeal to students and scholars working in the field of Asia Pacific studies as well as to businesspersons and policymakers taking decisions in the region

Social Issues and Policies in Asia Raymond K. H. Chan, Lih-Rong Wang, Jens O. Zinn, 2014-06-26 In the past few decades societies in Asia have experienced rapid and dramatic changes in their economic social and political spheres Despite the wide diversity among these countries a few general trends can be observed Globalization has swept across Asia bringing intensive economic interactions with a strong commitment to liberalism and market capitalism Wage labour has become the common form of employment Individuals as well as countries are increasingly exposed to the competitive and uncertain global market Employment protection particularly for vulnerable labour groups youth women seniors and migrants has become a pressing issue for most Asian governments Industrialization and urbanization have had a major impact on demographics family structures and normative frameworks The declining fertility rate has been recognized as a defining feature of a modern society leading to small families and reducing instances of multi generational co residency Changing family structures have contributed to changes in family values and roles especially the role of women Sometimes willingly sometimes compelled women are entering the workplace in increasing numbers particularly as migrant workers Similarly the elderly are experiencing changes in their roles and participation in society Family duties compete and are often in conflict with the demands of work The issue of providing adequate and quality care to family members has been exacerbated by the fact that Asian societies are ageing It is commonly acknowledged that in Asian societies personal care and support needs are primarily met by family both immediate and extended and to a lesser degree by community networks Governments had gradually established their own social welfare systems in an effort to support economic growth and sustain their legitimacy by meeting certain recognized social needs The success of these ventures varies across societies and naturally there have been criticisms of the breadth and depth of these provisions This book addresses social issues related to family ageing and work that arise from these changes in Japan Korea Taiwan Hong Kong China Philippine and Sri Lanka These societies represent different levels of economic and social development but face similar challenges and their social interventions can be usefully compared This variety of subjects provides the reader with a more comprehensive understanding of the changes that have occurred the problems that have emerged and the strategies that have been adopted This volume provides insight into ways of addressing social issues in this rapidly changing part of the world

Challenges to the Global Trading System Sumner La

Croix, Peter Petri, 2007-03-21 International trade continues to expand robustly in East Asia and elsewhere but global trade negotiations have collapsed and globalization is widely criticized In this book the participants of the thirtieth Pacific Trade and Development Conference including the then Director General of the World Trade Organization and leading government officials academics and executives from a dozen major Pacific Rim economies debate whether global negotiations have ended once and for all or are suffering temporarily from globalization fatigue whether East Asia's new regional partnerships will advance or undermine the global trading system and whether the region's trade tensions with the United States will intensify or subside They provide new empirical evidence on how trade affects the distribution of income the location of pollution intensive industries the causes of outsourcing the structure of the intellectual property regime and international security And they probe the implications of adjustment to globalization how can countries reap the benefits of trade while controlling the risks faced by the poor and perhaps more importantly the politically strong
