Politics Of Research:

The Social Politics of Research Collaboration Gabriele Griffin, Katarina Hamberg, Britta Lundgren, 2013-06-07 The past two decades have seen an increasing emphasis on large and interdisciplinary research configurations such as research networks and centers of excellence including those in Social Sciences and Humanities research. Little research has been undertaken however to understand how these new large research structures that are being called forth by research funders and research higher education institutions alike function socially and what the impact of operating within such structures is on those working within and those working with them. Past writers have discussed the intra-agentic operations of human researchers and the material laboratory environment in its broadest sense. This volume is concerned with the social politics of research collaboration in relation to six key positions: leaders of large research formations; leaders of sub-projects within large collaborations; participant-researchers; junior and early-career researchers; advisory board members; and those who look in from the outside such as researchers who are unfunded. It explores the mostly unacknowledged but critical aspect of social structures in research, discussing issues such as struggles over leadership styles, the marginalization of researchers working cross-disciplinarily, power hierarchies and intellectual ownership, and the silencing of dissent in research. The Emotional Politics of Research Collaboration

Gabriele Griffin, Annelie Bränström-Öhman, Hildur Kalman, 2013-07-18 Research collaboration in the form of networks, projects, and centers has become one of the dominant modes of engaging in research, especially funded research across all academic domains. However, there has been little research on the processes of such collaborations, particularly their affective dimensions. These, as this volume demonstrates and as researchers know well, are highly important yet mostly not directly engaged with when scientists work together, even though they are experienced by everybody involved. This volume is the first to consider questions such as how the naming of projects impacts on their accompanying affect, scapes the policing or disciplining of emotions in research collaborations, their accompanying tensions, and how these might be managed, and the challenges to trust between scientists that such collaborations present. Drawing on theories of affect and literature on collaboration, as well as on the contributors' experiences of being involved in large-scale research projects, the volume also importantly deals directly with some of the key emotions that occur during research collaborations, such as blame, elation, frustration, alienation, and belonging, and suggests some ways in which one might engage productively with the affective dimensions of research collaboration. Qualitative Inquiry and the Politics of Research the Internet have caused many changes in the realm of politics Aspects of engineering computer science mathematics or natural science can be applied to politics Politicians and candidates use their own websites and social network profiles to get their message out Revolutions in many countries in the Middle East and North Africa have started in large part due to social networking websites such as Facebook and Twitter Social networking has also played a role in protests and riots in numerous countries The mainstream media no longer has a monopoly on political commentary as anybody can set up a blog or post a video online Now political activists can network together online The Handbook of Research on Politics in the Computer Age is a pivotal reference source that serves to increase the understanding of methods for politics in the computer age the effectiveness of these methods and tools for analyzing these methods The book includes research chapters on different aspects of politics with information technology engineering computer science or math from 27 researchers at 20 universities and research organizations in Belgium Brazil Cape Verde Egypt Finland France Hungary Italy Mexico Nigeria Norway Portugal and the United States of America Highlighting topics such as online campaigning and fake news the prospective audience includes but is not limited to researchers political and public policy analysts political scientists engineers computer scientists political campaign managers and staff politicians and their staff political operatives professors students and individuals working in the fields of politics e politics e government new media and communication studies and Internet marketing

Handbook of Research on Urban Politics and Policy in the United States Ronald K. Vogel,1997-01-21 A comprehensive reference work which provides a way to access research on urban politics and policy in the United States Experts in the field guide readers through major controversies while evaluating and assessing the subfields of urban politics and policy Each chapter follows the same basic organization with topics such as methodological and theoretical issues current states of the field and directions for future research For students this work provides a starting place to guide them to the most important works in a particular subfield and a context to place their work in a larger body of knowledge For scholars it serves as a reference work for immediately familiarity with subfields of the discipline including classic studies and major research questions For urban policymakers or analysts the handbook provides a wealth of information and allows quick identification of existing academic knowledge and research relevant to the problem at hand

The Politics of Academic Research Matthew C. Ringgenberg,Chong Shu,Ingrid M. Werner,2023 We develop a novel measure of political slant in research to examine whether political ideology influences the content and use of academic research Our measure examines the frequency of citations from think tanks with different political ideologies and allows us to examine both the supply and demand for research We find that research in Economics and Political Science displays a liberal slant while Finance and Accounting research exhibits a conservative slant and these differences cannot be accounted for by variations in research topics We also find that the ideological slant of researchers is positively correlated with that of their Ph D institution and research conducted outside universities appears to cater more to the political party of the current President Finally political donations data confirms that the ideological slant we measure based on think tank citations aligns with the political values of researchers Our findings have important implications for the structure of research funding

Sanders, 1987 In the past twenty years the study of urban politics has shifted from a predominant concern with political culture and ethos to a preoccupation with political economy particularly that of urban development Urban scholars have come to recognize that cities are shaped by forces beyond their boundaries From that focus have emerged the views that cities are clearly engaged in economic competition that market processes are shaped by national policy decisions sometimes intentionally and sometimes inadvertently and that the costs and benefits of economic growth are unevenly distributed But what else needs to be said about the policies and politics of urban development To supplement prevailing theories The Politics of Urban Development argues that the role of local actors in making development decisions merits closer study Whatever the structural constraints politics still matters Collectively the essays provide ample evidence that local government officials and other community actors do not simply follow the imperatives that derive from the national political economy they are able to assert a significant degree of influence over the shared destiny of an urban population The impact of the collection is to heighten awareness of local political practices and of how and why they make a difference
