Siddhartha Hermann Hesse, 2017-09-02 In the novel Siddhartha, a young man leaves his family for a contemplative life, then restless, discards it for one of the flesh. He conceives a son but, bored and sickened by lust and greed, moves on again. Near despair, Siddhartha comes to a river where he hears a unique sound. This sound signals the true beginning of his life, the beginning of suffering, rejection, peace, and finally wisdom.

About Hermann Hesse: Hermann Hesse was a German-Swiss poet, novelist, and painter. In 1946, he received the Nobel Prize in Literature. His best-known works include Steppenwolf, Siddhartha, and The Glass Bead Game, also known as Magister Ludi, which explore an individual's search for spirituality outside society. In his time, Hesse was a popular and influential author in the German-speaking world; worldwide fame only came later. Hesse's first great novel, Peter Camenzind, was received enthusiastically by young Germans desiring a different and more natural way of life at the time of great economic and technological progress in the country. After he meets Buddha, he finally gets tired of being broke, ass, and homeless, and he goes into town where he makes a pile of money. This is good because everyone knows that engaging in capitalism is the only proper way to go through life. As a bonus, he also meets a beautiful woman. Then just when he's having a good ole time doing business, drinking, gambling, and making time with the woman, the damn fool's hippie ideas pop up again, and he walks away from all of it. Remember that Chris Farley routine on Saturday Night Live where he'd scream that someone would end up living in a van down by the river? Well, this hippie ends up living in a hut down by the river. And that's even worse because at least you could play the radio in a van. Finally, Siddhartha thinks that the river is god. Or something stupid like that. It just didn't make any sense. Give me one of them Lee Child novels any day over this hippie dippie crap. That Jack Reacher is a man's man. Most religions know of it as Enlightenment when the individual transcends himself and sees himself as one with the ultimate reality. It can be theistic, the
