

Reflection.

It is easy to acquire the language because we all born with this ability. There are 7000 languages approximately all over the world and because of globalization some languages are decreasing, on the other hand some others are disappearing and in this case English language is becoming more and more widespread. This is a very big issue because we as future English teachers have to be aware of this situation. We should know why English is so important nowadays and we must be able to explain to others the history of English.

The text shows clearly the origins and the history of English which is pretty interesting. The history said that the Celts arrived around 3000 years ago and with time there were many other tribes all over Europe and one of that tribes may derive the names of Britain and British. When the Roman Empire ruled Europe Latin was spoken. When English officially starts with the reach of the British Isles there were several Germanic tribes. The word "English" derives from "the Angles" a Germanic tribe. English has adopted vocabulary from Latin, French and Scandinavian. The best resource of English and its history is the Oxford English Dictionary.

The text tell us about different level of the English vocabulary such as: sounds, words and sentences. English has no tone and no nasalized as other languages and also there is a big difference among Old English and Modern English. Old English has a number of endings which are mainly nouns and Modern English use more grammatical words. It is a change from synthetic to analytic. Also, there are some external and internal changes. The external change deal with economic, political, geographical and social identity among others. The internal change has to do with linguistic reasons when words are reanalyzed.

It is interesting to know about English history because now we can know where English came from and how it was created and the amounts of words which are derive from other countries.
