Management of Renal Hypertension G.R. Catto,2013-04-17 During the last few years renal hypertension has become a subject of increasing importance The development of improved radiological techniques notably intravenous and intra arterial digital subtraction angiography has made the diagnosis of renal artery stenosis more reliable while advances in vascular surgery and the introduction of percutaneous trans luminal angioplasty have caused major changes in clinical practice The increasing use of such potent antihypertensive agents as the angiotensin I converting enzyme inhibitors has emphasized the problem of renal artery stenosis in older patients with wide spread vascular disease as well as improving the prognosis of patients with accelerated hypertension This book examines the surgical and medical aspects of renal hypertension in the light of these recent advances Each chapter has been written by a recognized expert in the field and provides information of relevance and practical importance to the average clinician The developments of the last decade have emphasized that renal hypertension is no longer a matter only for the nephrologist but a subject on which all clinicians should be well informed National Library of Medicine Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), Kidney Disease and Nephrology Index, 1975-07 Haemodialysis G.R. Catto, 2012-12-06. For more than a generation, haemodialysis has been the principal method of treating patients with both acute and chronic renal failure. Initially, developments and improvements in the system were highly technical and relevant to only a relatively small number of specialists in nephrology. More recently, as advances in therapy have demonstrated the value of haemoperfusion for certain types of poisoning, the basic principles of haemodialysis have been perceived as important in many areas of clinical practice. In this volume, the potential advantages of bicarbonate haemodialysis are objectively assessed, the technical and clinical aspects of both haemofiltration and haemoperfusion discussed, and the continuing problems associated with such extracorporeal circuits analysed. All the chapters have been written by recognized experts in their field. The increasing availability of highly technical facilities for appropriately selected patients should ensure that the information contained in the book is relevant not only to nephrologists but to all practising clinicians. Chronic Renal Failure G.R. Catto, 2012-12-06. For the last two decades, the topic of chronic renal failure has been dominated by discussions on dialysis and transplantation. As facilities for treating patients with end-stage renal failure have become more readily available at least in Europe and North America, attention has once again been drawn to conservative measures which may improve both the overall prognosis and the quality of life of patients with renal impairment. Although severe renal failure may be progressive and many patients will ultimately require some form of renal replacement therapy, it is now widely appreciated that distressing symptoms can often be ameliorated by judicious medical treatment. Children as well as, and perhaps to a greater extent than adults, may benefit from such therapy. This volume examines relevant trends in the conservative management of both adults and children with chronic renal failure. Each chapter has been written by recognized experts and provides information of clinical relevance for the average clinician. As the overall prognosis for patients with end-stage renal failure improves, it is clear the management of patients with relatively stable chronic renal failure is an important topic not only for nephrologists but for all practising clinicians. Calculus Disease G.R. Catto, 2012-12-06. Renal stone disease remains a common clinical problem. Patients may attend either medical or surgical clinics and not infrequently present as acute abdominal emergencies to general practitioners, physicians, surgeons, and even gynaecologists. Recent urinary calculi continue to cause considerable morbidity despite the recent advances in our understanding of the pathogenesis of the different types of stones involved and despite improvements in treatment by appropriate drug therapy, by ultrasound techniques, and by lithotripsy. This volume discusses the investigation and management of patients with calculus disease. Each chapter has been written by an experienced clinician and provides information of considerable relevance and importance for all doctors engaged in clinical practice The technical developments of the last few years have clearly demonstrated that renal stone disease even when recurrent should be an uncommon cause of chronic renal failure Knowledge of the recent developments in this field is important for all practising doctors and even more important for their patients National Kidney Foundation Primer on Kidney Diseases Scott J. Continuous Ambulatory Peritoneal Dialysis G.R. Catto, 2012-12-06 For more than a generation haemodialysis has been the principal method of treating patients with both acute and chronic renal failure Initially developments and improvements in the system were highly technical and relevant to only a relatively small number of specialists in nephrology More recently as advances in therapy have demonstrated the value of haemofiltration in the intensive therapy unit and haemoperfusion for certain types of poisoning the basic principles of haemodialysis have been perceived as important in many areas of clinical practice In this volume the potential advantages of bicarbonate haemodialysis are objectively assessed the technical and clinical aspects of both haemofiltration and haemoperfusion discussed and the continuing problems associated with such extracorporeal circuits analysed All the chapters have been written by recognized experts in their field The increasing availability of highly technical facilities for appropriately selected patients should ensure that the information contained in the book is relevant not only to nephrologists but to all practising clinicians ABOUT THE EDITOR Dr Graeme R D Catto is Professor in Medicine and Therapeutics at the University of Aberdeen and Honorary Consultant Physician Nephrologist to the Grampian Health Board His current interest in transplant immunology was stimulated as a Harkness Fellow at Harvard Medical School and the Peter Bent Brighton Hospital Boston USA He is a member of many medical societies including the Association of Physicians of Great Britain and Ireland the Renal Association and the Transplantation Society

Urinary Tract Infection G.R. Catto, 2012-12-06 Urinary tract infection remains one of the most common reasons for an individual seeking medical advice Although the associated morbidity varies widely in adults such infections are less common but may constitute severe life threatening illness in children and in the elderly Diagnostic tests and treatment have been rationalized in recent years but many practising doctors still have difficulty in appreciating the pathophysiological principles involved Particular difficulty is often experienced when treating patients with recurrent urinary tract infections covert bacteriuria vesicoureteric reflux elderly patients and those with indwelling catheters These topics are fully discussed in this volume Each chapter has been written by a recognized expert and practical aspects of patient management have been emphasized The information presented in this volume should prove of interest not only to nephrologists but to all practising clinicians VII ABOUT THE EDITOR Professor Graeme R D Catto is Professor in Medicine and Therapeutics at the University of Aberdeen and Honorary Consultant Physician Nephrologist to the Grampian Health Board His current interest in transplant immunology was stimulated as a Harkness Fellow at Harvard Medical School and the Peter Bent Brighton Hos
